Storm cash coming for growers?

INCOME supplements could be on the way for local growers impacted by two devastating hailstorms that wreaked havoc on the region over the past three weeks.

Clean-up money for councils and property owners is already approved, however growers – particularly of wine grapes – who watched their crops be destroyed on October 28 and November 6 are now sweating on government financial aid to replace income lost in the storms.

Chaffey MP Tim Whetstone has today hinted support could be on the way.

Meanwhile Riverland small grower Meta Sindos (pictured), who lost 60 per cent of his pumpkin, broad bean and melon crop, says the emotional cost of the storms is just as significant as the economic burden.

RISK MANAGEMENT

A LOCAL politician has urged Riverlanders to remain vigilant, as the region faces a higher risk of Covid-19 spread than other areas of the state once state borders reopen next Tuesday.

with Covid-safe practices, after a roadmap of restriction changes was unveiled earlier this week by the state government.

"My concern with the Riverland is that we are a border community, on a federal highway and are a thoroughfare from the eastern seaboard into or through South Australia, so we need to stay vigilant if we are to keep our communities as safe as possible," he said.

"If there are still people giving consideration to vaccination, please get an informed opinion from your GP or your doctor. Don't listen to anti-vaccination groups.

"Listen to professional medical advice and make your decisions based on the best available information.

"To keep our region in the best situation is first and foremost vaccination, continuing to wear masks, social distancing, regular hand-washing and QR code check-ins.

Our Covid risk management

“Those are the staples we have been using for many months now and we need to continue to keep our community as safe as possible while enduring what I would consider a higher than average threat of Covid-19.”

Premier Steven Marshall said from November 23 fully vaccinated South Australians will only need to quarantine for seven days after coming into close contact with a confirmed case, while unvaccinated people will need to quarantine for 14 days.

“Achieving high vaccination rates is a key part of our strong plan to be Covid-ready and South Australia’s pandemic control going forward,” he said.

“Not only will it reduce time in quarantine, it is the best way for people to protect themselves, their loved ones and the community from this nasty disease.”

Updated testing and quarantine requirements will also redefine who is classified as a close and casual contact, with fully vaccinated casual contacts only isolating until they receive their first negative test result.

Mr Whetstone said the release of the roadmap just over a week before borders were set to reopen was due to officials only receiving Doherty Institute modelling late last week.

“SA Health, SAPOL and the Transition Committee have been working around the clock to make sure we get a roadmap released,” he said.

“We could always say we need more information sooner, but people now need to focus on what they can do to play a role in South Australia standing the best chance of minimising Covid-19 spread.

“We’ll continue to see the rollout of the roadmap and what it means for people, what it means for border communities and... how we best prepare ourselves for that.”

Ebert's fitting farewell

JACK HUDSON

FOR the final time, Russell Ebert drew a significant crowd of thousands to Alberton Oval as South Australians packed the traditional home of the Port Adelaide Football Club to say farewell to a great yesterday.

Riverland product Ebert passed away earlier this month after an 11-month battle with acute myeloid leukemia.

Family, friends and fans packed into Alberton Oval and paid tribute to the four-time Magarey Medallist, three-time premiership player and former captain and coach of Port Adelaide.

Ebert's Loxton-based older brother Bill opened the tributes with stories from their childhood growing up, reflecting on Thursday afternoon phone calls and stories about getting up to no good.

Ebert's three children, Tammie, Ben and Brett, all remembered their dad and what it was like.

“Russell, Russ, Herb, Ebo, God,” Tammie said.

“But to us we had the privilege of calling him our dad.

“Growing up in the Ebert household was surrounded by love, sport and Port Adelaide.”

The Port Adelaide club chaplain, the reverend Brandon Chaplin, led the attendees in prayer, while Rachael Leahcar sang Amazing Grace.

Former teammates Max James and Peter Woite reflected on stories from their playing days for both the Magpies and South Australia, before a highlights package was played over the big screens.

Port Adelaide chief executive Matthew Richardson and former premiership captain Tim Ginever read out the final speeches before Ebert made his final trip around Alberton Oval.

Ebert was given a lap of honour and a standing ovation from the crowd, while past and present Port Adelaide players gave a guard of honour along the boundary line.

Big bucks to Loxton Waikerie

PROJECTS aimed at “supporting local jobs, businesses and boosting the economy” in a Riverland council have received new funding under an ongoing initiative.

The federal government yesterday announced $1.65m in funding for the Loxton Waikerie council for projects through phase 3 of the Local Road and Community Infrastructure Program.

A total of $825,615 has been allocated to complete upgrades to Taplan Road.

“Every single project we support makes a huge difference to our local community,” Barker MP Tony Pasin said.

Tim calls out 'false' myocarditis rumours

JOSH BRINE

A RIVERLAND politician has refuted rumours of a cluster of Covid-19 vaccine-related myocarditis cases in the region, calling them "false and misleading".

In a post on his Facebook page last Wednesday, Chaffey MP Tim Whetstone responded to claims circulating online that a group of Riverland students had experienced inflammation of the heart after receiving Pfizer Covid-19 vaccines, warning against the spread of misinformation.

"Claims of myocarditis in a group of young students in the Riverland are false and misleading," he said.

"SA Health have confirmed that there are no known cases in the Riverland, and I have personally spoken to all of the relevant leaders in SA Health and the Education Department.

"These claims circulating in the Riverland are simply falsehoods."

In a statement issued to The Murray Pioneer, an SA Health spokesperson said the department was not aware of a group of myocarditis cases in the Riverland, and that regulators continue to advise that benefits of the vaccine outweigh any risks.

"Getting vaccinated against Covid-19 is the best way to protect your loved ones and the community, and the benefits of the Covid-19 vaccines far outweigh the potential very rare side effects," they said.

"Myocarditis is a known, but rare side effect of the Pfizer and Moderna vaccines and it is usually mild, with most people getting better within a few days.

"It is very important to note, myocarditis is seen much more commonly and more severely in people who are infected with Covid-19 than people who have been vaccinated against Covid-19."

Myocarditis and pericarditis – inflammation of the membrane surrounding the heart – are described as "rare" side effects of the Pfizer and Moderna vaccines by the Therapeutic Goods Administration (TGA) with cases occurring in about one in 100,000 people.

The rate is slightly higher for young men and teenage boys after the second dose of an mRNA vaccine, at four to seven cases per 100,000 people.

A report released earlier this year by the American Center for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) found the rate of people with Covid-19 developing myocarditis was about 150 cases per 100,000 people.

Chaffey MP Tim Whetstone says rumours regarding a cluster of Covid-19 vaccine-related myocarditis cases in the Riverland are "misleading" and "falsehoods".

According to the Mayo Clinic, most myocarditis cases will resolve quickly without long-term complications, though rare severe cases may cause permanent damage to the heart muscle which, if left untreated, can cause arrhythmia, heart failure, heart attack or stroke.

Anyone can report a suspected side effect directly to the TGA, through a health professional, or by calling the NPS MedicineWise Adverse Medicine Events phone line (1300 134 237).

Lights out on iconic Loxton Xmas display

STEPHANIE THOMPSON

AFTER 37 years, Loxton North man Peter Mangelsdorf will pull the plug on his iconic and much-loved Christmas display following the 2021 festive season.

Mr Mangelsdorf said this year's Fairweather Avenue display – which spans 250m – would be his last.

"I haven't been well for the past three months," he said.

"I'll be sad to see it go."

Working bees will be held in coming days to help Mr Mangelsdorf erect the displays, with the main one this Friday from 4pm until 7pm, followed by barbecue tea.

However, Mr Mangelsdorf said talks are under way to house his mammoth Christmas collection elsewhere in Loxton.

"I will remain on the Christmas Lights Committee and be part of my Christmas Wonderland, just not at my place," he said.

"People have learnt from what I've done and copied things. It's been an encouragement to other people and that's what I've really liked."

Mr Mangelsdorf said he drew inspiration from the West End Brewery Christmas lights in Adelaide.

"Christmas Wonderland is a complete Christmas story, starting off with Bethlehem and going through all aspects of Christmas," he said.

"It's a flowing story of everything that happens at Christmas time."

The final Christmas Wonderland will be available for viewing from 8.30pm to 11pm every day from Saturday, November 27 to Friday, December 31.

Jabs mandated for teachers and childcare workers

ALL Riverland teachers and early childhood educators will need to be vaccinated against Covid-19, the state government announced yesterday.

Under a new direction, anyone who works or volunteers at an SA school, preschool, childcare centre or early learning centre will need to have received at least one dose of a Covid-19 vaccine by December 10, and have made a booking for a second dose.

The direction also applies to building contractors, parent helpers, Education Department employees and contractors, governing council members, OSHC and vacation care providers, bus drivers and family day carers.

Not included in the direction are students, parents who do not work/volunteer at the school, preschool or childcare centre, playgroups or play centres off site, delivery drivers, people responding to urgent maintenance tasks or an emergency situation.

All eligible students aged 12 and up are also "strongly encouraged" to be fully vaccinated.

THE YEARS GO BY

BY PETER AND CARLA MAGAREY

The people who built Barmera

THE polite way of describing Barmera's status is that the town is evolving.

In part thanks to an ageing demographic, but also due to the general state of retail businesses, its main street will never recapture the bustling vibe it had as recently as the 1990s.

In that regard, it cannot and will not compete with Renmark or even Berri.

But it still has plenty to offer, and its shining jewel, Lake Bonney, will remain a strong point for years to come – provided it is never again blocked off from the main river channel.

But in 2021, it is hard to imagine any young locals – who are growing up in any Riverland town – will ever have the same connection to their home town as several seniors who attended Barmera's centenary dinner on Saturday night.

That's mainly because everything is already established, and sporting and community groups are in fact dropping off, not starting up – as evidenced by the malaise currently facing the RFL Independent football competition, and other community groups struggling with membership and volunteer numbers.

A handful of the folk at the Barmera Hotel on Saturday night played key roles in setting up some of the pillars upon which towns like Barmera are built.

Former Barmera mayor Brian Caddy's astonishing connection to so many of the town's important milestones and achievements was highlighted. His family's pride in seeing him talk about a few of them was obvious.

Mr Caddy lost his wife, Wendy, only weeks ago and while being interviewed by current Berri Barmera Mayor Peter Hunt, reflected that he was standing in the exact spot where his wedding table was 56 years ago.

The event was a veritable who's who of Barmera's living history.

From Robert Drogemuller speaking about his memories of the town and entertaining the gathering in his trademark no-fuss manner, to Barmera Primary School icon Glenys Frost's typically bright contribution – which could have gone on for much longer.

Typically understated John Beech, who has lived his entire life in Barmera and together with wife, Betty, brought up a large family in the town, had a short stint on the mic. Mr Beech in fact led the fight to have Lake Bonney reconnected to the River Murray in the 2000s and on the weekend one of his children stated that he "bleeds for Barmera".

Julie Krollig spoke passionately about a centenary window display, while others also like Glenys Matthews and Mary Ridley added their parts to what was a worthwhile evening.

Pasin's conviction on mandates

FOR the second time in three weeks, Barker MP Tony Pasin has expressed his concerns over vaccine mandates, this time via a letter to the editor in today's Murray Pioneer, and sent elsewhere across his electorate.

We will all be asked to vote at three elections next year: federal, state and local.

At a time when pro-vaccine stances are not only fashionable, but pretty much wall-to-wall, anything even approaching straying from that line is bold.

As Mr Pasin stresses again today, he is pro-vaccine, but given the black and white nature of current debate, being against vaccine mandates is often conflated with being an anti-vaxxer.

Convictions are malleable in modern politics, as Mr Pasin's boss showed last week when backflipping on his previous election stance by suddenly endorsing electric vehicles.

Other politicians might also oppose vaccine mandates, but with an eye to the upcoming polls, are likely to keep their opinions to themselves. Kudos then to Mr Pasin for speaking up, unprompted, simply because he believes it is the right thing to do.

Opening day, Loxton Swimming Pool, 2pm, February 16, 1963: D. Ridley (left), Hal Mason, Lorraine Pope, of Kingston-On-Murray, Harry Tickle, Allen Hosking and Roy Glatz at the Loxton Swimming Pool's opening day on February 16, 1963. Twelve days later, Lorraine (later Mrs Malcolm Kroeger), sponsored by the Loxton Swimming Club, was crowned Loxton Mardi Gras sixth queen. In the late 1950s, Loxton's Amateur Swimming Club was formed, with locals the reverend F. Willoughby the inaugural president, and Dr Malcolm Samuel the first patron. The 22-member pool committee had constructed a "river pool" in the Murray with a pontoon (wood-decking) for diving but the 1956 flood had prevented its use. When Harry Tickle became club president he envisaged an "inland swimming pool" in Loxton. Funds came from many directions, including Loxton's Mardi Gras. The first event (1958) raised $2400, the second (1959) $4000, and to February 1978, Mardi Gras had raised $16,548. Another source was the "buy a tile for the pool" scheme. Land for the pool was purchased from the Lands Department in December 1959. The Murray Pioneer reported: "The culmination of a magnificent community effort saw the official opening on Saturday of the Loxton Olympic Swimming Pool, which at this stage represents a ($60,000+) project." LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Time to fix this 'dangerous' building

I REFER to temporary repairs carried out to make the old bakery in Waikerie safe.

As of Friday, November 5, 2021, I have written to Loxton Waikerie council asking for a review under Section 270 of the Local Government Act regarding the council's decision that this burnt-out building is safe.

I quote from correspondence received from the council dated October 12, 2021:

"I confirm my advice that the repairs to the building located at 18-22 McCoy Street, Waikerie, whilst not a permanent fix, have made the building safe from danger to the public and adjoining properties."

I consider the above statement is inaccurate by omission and therefore misleading.

The most dangerous section of this site is the roof, something the Loxton Waikerie council refuses to identify or confirm. Is this therefore avoiding its responsibility?

I also believe council's inaction is not only negligent, but also a serious breach of the Code of Conduct, in that:

□ The sheets of iron are loose, buckled, deteriorated, split and collapsed, due to burnt-out purlins.

□ A section of the roof that has been covered by a tarp – which has holes – has also collapsed.

□ The extended vent on the roof is no longer secure as it has lifted from the loose and buckled sheets of iron that have collapsed.

□ The wires holding this vent are broken apart from one.

This dangerous site has been a death trap for three years and continues to be dangerous to this present day. It should be investigated by the appropriate authorities.

The photographs that I have taken on June 27, 2021 will confirm the dangers and immediate threat exposed to the public.

I have suggested that Loxton Waikerie council view the carnage on the Sturt Highway caused by signage and sheets of iron that became flying missiles due to hazardous weather conditions – during the recent storm – and not by sub-standard, temporary repairs.

I have also stated in my latest correspondence that Loxton Waikerie council and the owners of this dangerous site should consider this disastrous weather event as a reprieve.

Consequences of forced vaccinations

AS the vaccine rollout gathers pace and we look to opening Australia's international and domestic borders, more and more emphasis is being put on the requirement to be vaccinated in order to participate in society.

In this regard, I am becoming increasingly concerned by the approach being taken by state governments to effectively mandate vaccinations. I expressed my concerns with this approach last month in the federal parliament.

While I am fully vaccinated against Covid-19, I made this choice freely. I was not coerced or made to take the vaccination against my will. I am grateful to live in a country that values freedoms.

Vaccine mandates, indirect or otherwise, threaten this principle.

Individuals must be free to choose and as individuals, they are responsible for the consequences of those choices.

Living with Covid-19 should not involve the need to flash our vaccination status around to get about our daily lives. Outside of an aged care setting you should not need a vaccination to get a job, sit in a café or watch your favourite sporting team.

To be clear, I am a pro-vaxxer. I encourage all Australians to roll-up their sleeves and get vaccinated, but importantly, I want a post-Covid society that does not impinge on our freedoms and a community that remains inclusive, regardless of an individual's vaccination status.

As a society we need to stop and think about the consequences of, effectively, forcing vaccinations on the unwilling and what this means for our fundamental freedoms.

TONY PASIN
Member for Barker

I'm with Pasin on vaxx mandates

READING the November 3 edition of The Murray Pioneer, you can see the contrast of the right and the left of the Liberal Party.

Barker MP Tony Pasin is from the right, like me, and believes in the constitution, freedom of speech and freedom of choice.

Tony has said clearly the individual has the right of choice whether they want to be vaccinated or not.

If you are scared of Covid-19, get vaccinated. If not, then don't.

Chaffey MP Tim Whetstone says the same thing, but says if you do not get vaccinated business will not allow you to enter.

Is he trying to coerce businesses into rejecting unvaccinated people?

Tony is right and Tim is wrong.

Tim is pushing for compulsory vaccination from a different angle, which is what the left does because of what I consider to be their communist beliefs.

Most people who don't want to be vaccinated are not anti-vaxxers, but would rather wait to see what happens – and there are lots of them starting to appear.

People who don't want to get vaccinated have equal rights to doctors and hospitals if they need them and world-class doctors are saying quite healthy people will recover without vaccinations.

Which brings me to the real point: money.

A friend of mine had been told by his friend in Adelaide, who works in the medical scene, to buy as many shares as you can in anything to do with Covid-19 as you will make a killing.

Why is the SA Premier and the SA Police Commissioner pushing for mandates?

What I would like to see and support is people marching against compulsory vaccinations. For the past 18 months unvaccinated nurses have been working with Covid-19 patients and haven't passed it on or spread Covid-19.

The panicked prophecies of doom and fear mongering is coming from our woke leaders.

I would like to hear from a police man or police woman who doesn't want to get vaccinated, as there is no evidence they spread Covid-19 either. If they are stood down, they remain an officer of the law.

If nurses, general public and police officers want to march on parliament house, I am more than willing to join you.

As with Mr Pasin, I hate looneys and communists.

On Remembrance Day last week we honoured the 60,000 soldiers who lost their lives to give us our freedom.

That respect must be upheld and not taken away by woke tossers in parliament.

RALF NOBILE
Berri

Pasin's each-way bet on mandate?

TONY Pasin can't seem to make up his mind – how can you trust a man who is so confused?

In one statement he says: "I do not endorse mandatory vaccinations, and I do not support mandating vaccines by stealth. Individuals should be free to choose (and) as individuals, they are responsible for the consequences of those choices."

But then he says:

"I agree with compulsory vaccinations for those working with our most vulnerable, such as aged-care workers and those working in quarantine facilities..."

What the?

He is pro-choice only if and when.

Has Mr Pasin forgotten that force or coercion or threats are not acceptable?

Has he forgotten that this drug – which is a vaccine – is very experimental and has caused multiple health issues, as well as deaths?

No one should be forced to be a lab rat in an experiment that is not FDA approved. It should always be an individual choice.

No one should be threatened with loss of income if they choose to wait until the experiment is over or until the FDA approve it.

People of Australia, while you are complying to this tyranny in 2021, you pave the way for allowing the government to experiment on all of us for the rest of our lives, our children's lives and our grandchildren's lives?

Stop complying, folks.

If the jab works, why do I need to be jabbed?

If the jab doesn't work, why do I need to be jabbed.

It's really that simple.

I WAS so fortunate to attend the Riverland Special School fashion parade at the Berri Town Hall on November 4.

Why is there always talk of moving the Visitor Information Centre in Berri? It is in the perfect place next to the river and cafe. A big thank you to the caring staff at Waikerie Foodland. An elderly friend was denied entry to Woolies as she couldn't remember her mobile number and refused to give her email. She went to Foodland and became faint. Staff found her a chair and gathered the items on her list. David helped her to her car and drove her home. He then gave her Foodland's number in case she needed help in the future. How lucky are we to have people like this in our town.

Zara Bella (Letters to the editor, 10/11/21), you won't be kicked out of venues for not being that some members of the community were dissatisfied and sought to blame Remark Paringa Council for its lack of support to the Riverland Dinghy Club's Dash 4 Cash event.

The event expected to attract over 1000 people and as such a Covid-19 management plan was required by SA Health.

The Riverland Dinghy Club required additional resources on top of what council provided, so it charged a nominal fee to patrons to cover costs.

Council staff worked with the Dinghy Club in preparation for the event to provide financial and in-kind support to ensure that the event could occur – and that it was an exciting and safe event for spectators.

The community may not be aware of the financial and in-kind support Renmark Paringa Council has provided to the Riverland Dinghy Club:

- 2017/18 - $5000 to upgrade the Riverland Dinghy Club radio system.
 - 2018/19 - $3000 for club shed upgrade with an air conditioner.
 - 2020/21 - $4000 fencing for new shed storage area.

Under-insured bushfire victims

I'VE been thinking about those unfortunate people who lost their homes in NSW bushfires and who are still living in very temporary accommodation two years later.

Our insurance company increases the replacement values and premiums every year.

But after the experience of people who lost their homes and discovered that they were underinsured, it must make others wonder about their insurance cover for which they are paying thousands of dollars in premiums a year.

And for those who were unable to afford insurance it's even harder.

Would it be too much for governments to negotiate with builders to transportable homes to aid some of these people? They could be delivered complete and possibly use the previous under-grounds.

Or could governments establish housing co-op societies with standard loans again?

Companion planting is the careful placement of plants (especially vegetables and herbs) which have been shown to have beneficial effects on one another. ... Some plants make good companions because their roots grow to different depths, so simply do not compete with each other for water and nutrients.

Sometimes, this comes down to simple physical reasons – taller plants provide shelter from sun and wind for plants that need protection. Climbing plants can be trained up over taller plants to maximise production in small spaces. Some plants make good companions because their roots grow to different depths, so simply do not compete with each other for water and nutrients.

Plants in the legume family (eg. Peas and beans) promote growth in nearby plants with their nitrogen fixing ability – nodules on the roots enable plants to convert atmospheric nitrogen into a form used by plants. Also they tend to be deep rooted, which promotes aeration of the soil, thus benefiting their neighbours.

The shape of some plants and their flowers can visually confuse insect pests. Other plants, especially herbs, contain strong smelling substances released by their leaves. These scents can swamp odours emitted by other plants and confuse insects seeking out a target.

Still other plants emit chemicals from their roots which can act as growth stimulants for other plants, or can act negatively to retard germination of seeds.

As Riverland storm bill hits an estimated $100m... Grower support coming?

HUGH SCHUITEMAKER and JOSH BRINE

RIVERLAND councils and property owners will have access to financial support to recover from storm damage – and a local MP expects further resources will soon be directed towards impacted local growers.

It was announced last week financial assistance for those affected by recent hailstorms in the region would be provided through the Commonwealth-State Disaster Recovery Funding Arrangements.

Chaffey MP Tim Whetstone expected further support – specifically for impacted horticultural growers – to be announced in the coming days.

“We are looking to tailor the level of government support,” Mr Whetstone said.

“I met with (Minister for Primary Industries and Regional Development) David Basham...

and they have put a support package to the Commonwealth.

“We have to know what the storm has meant to our economy, what infrastructure has been damaged, and what it’s meant to individual people who have been impacted by the storm.

“I’m envisioning further support will be announced either later this week, or early next week, so we can make sure we’re covering our bases.”

Mr Whetstone said the two hailstorms were believed to have caused more than $100m in damage to the region.

“It’s important everyone register with their commodity groups, or with PIRSA, because the support agencies can’t help if they don’t know your current situation,” he said.

“It’s important we have a clear picture of how the region has been impacted. We know the region has suffered over $100m in losses, and that needs to be recognised.

“Those businesses that have been storm-affected should be able to access a level of support. They need to deal with the financial burden, but we also need a level of financial support for mental health.”

Barker MP Tony Pasin said clean-up and repair works to be conducted by Riverland councils would also be supported.

“This disaster assistance will provide a range of practical measures, including debris removal from properties and access to personal and financial counselling, to help... locals get back on their feet as soon as possible,” Mr Pasin said.

“There have also been significant volumes of debris from the storm that have left many locals in an incredibly difficult position. Barossa, Murraylands and Riverland councils will also be supported with the costs of their clean-up and the restoration of public infrastructure, including roads.”

Mr Basham said it was crucial for Riverland growers to report damage suffered from the storms.

“We are working closely with industry and the Federal Government to understand the extent of the damage and provide support for South Australians impacted by the recent storms,” Mr Basham said.

“We anticipate we will know more about those shortly but in the meantime, I encourage those impacted to call the hotline on 1800 931 314 so we can get detailed damage assessments done as quickly as possible.”

Further information regarding the financial support measures can be found by visiting the website (www.disasterassist.gov.au), or by calling the Financial Counselling Helpline on 1800 007 007.

Growers pick up the pieces after storms

JOSH BRINE

RIVERLAND small growers are counting the emotional and financial costs of recent storms that devastated local crops.

Barmera grower Meta Sindos said he lost 60 per cent of his crop, which included pumpkins, broad beans and melons, when hail “pulverised” his property on Saturday, November 6.

“It was like snow out there – the whole block was white,” he said.

“I’ve never seen anything like it. “What’s survived now will come back, but the smaller stuff was more vulnerable.”

Mr Sindos said while growers would bear a financial loss, the emotional cost of the storms was also significant.

“It is sad, and trying to get motivated to go back out there is the worst part about it,” he said.

“I went out on the block the next day and thought I’d take a bit of a break and not go out there for a while.

“It was pretty devastating, especially for grape growers who can’t get a crop until next year.

“It is depressing in a way, having everything happening at once.”

Mr Sindos said although financial support from government was appreciated, some small growers believed the process of applying for compensation was too difficult.

“People think there are that many hurdles to jump through once you get to the end it’s not worth it,” he said.

“It’s hard because they can’t bail out every business, but everyone around here is pretty resilient. You just get on with it because you can’t do much about it.”

“It is sad, and trying to get motivated to go back out there is the worst part...”

Record-setting Run 'for Russell'

By JOSH BRINE

josh.brine@murraypioneer.com.au

AN annual 'floating fundraiser' raised a record figure of more than $700,000 for South Australians living with disability as it travelled through the Riverland last week.

The 15th Mighty River Run wrapped up in Berri on Friday, ending a six-day journey along the Murray River from Mannum.

Travelling aboard a near-record number of boats, entrants raised $719,000 for Novita – a figure that is expected to rise as final receipts come in.

Event ambassador and co-founder John Riddell said participants had shown "great spirit" despite poor weather throughout the run.

"The people who go on this just adapt and they know what they're doing it for – I can't talk highly enough of them," he said.

"When me, Russell Ebert and Jason 'Snowy' Carter came up with the idea we thought we would do four.

"The first one raised about $120,000, so to have raised $700,000 is remarkable."

Mr Riddell said he believed the level of fundraising was a tribute to his "great mate" Ebert, who died earlier this month.

"I sent him a message, and I know that he got it before he passed, saying 'Russell, I think they're doing it for you'," he said.

"You've got to think why did this one end up at $700,000? It's got to be something to do with Russell.

"They all love him, so I think they just gave and gave.

"The result is phenomenal... you'd have to put this down as our biggest success so far."

The fundraiser included the traditional Novita Client Day lunch held at The Precinct in Loxton on Thursday, with River Run participants dressing up for the occasion.

Local Novita client Bryce Westbrook said the lunch, which included a range of games and activities, was "really fun".

"I enjoy everyone's company from the River Run and they are fun to do stuff with," he said.

"It's amazing all the costumes and the boats and all the fundraising they do.

"Some people have different abilities, but we don't worry about it and we all just have fun."

This year's event follows the opening of a new Berri service hub for Novita in June, and the launch of a new transition-to-work program.

Novita Berri staff member Heather Robertson said several clients had already joined the program, which began in October.

"They're learning social skills and getting out and about and also learning practical working knowledge in the industries around the local region," she said.

"Bryce has been working in a local pet shop because he wanted to work with animals.

"Another participant is going to the Berri kindy because she wanted to work with children, so they've kindly supported us as well.

"With the money raised by things like the Mighty River Run, Novita is bringing more services up to the Riverland which is just incredible."

Loxton Waikerie council will consider removing all the jacaranda trees surrounding the East Terrace rotunda when it meets this Friday. PHOTO: Stephanie Thompson Bye bye jacarandas?

A LOCAL council will consider the removal of long-standing main street trees at this Friday's meeting.

The Loxton Recreation Grounds Committee recommended Loxton Waikerie Council consider removing all 13 jacaranda trees surrounding the East Terrace rotunda.

Loxton Recreation Grounds Committee chairperson David Kimber said the ill health of the trees was the premise for the recommendation and caused "considerable discussion".

"There was a lot of debate," he said.

"We thought after discussion (that) the best thing was to remove them all, plant quite expensive mature trees and finish off the main street."

The recommendation to council is that the jacaranda trees be replaced with established Chinese elm trees, using surplus street tree funding to the value of $20,000.

Loxton's main street currently consists of plane trees, Chinese pistachios, jacarandas and claret ash trees.

Red Cross coming to Riverland next month

THE Red Cross Lifblood is calling on locals to roll up their sleeves and donate blood, with the organisation's mobile donor centre set to visit the Riverland next month.

A pop-up clinic will be set up at the Berri Town Hall on Wilson Street on Monday, December 13 from 1.30pm to 6pm, and Tuesday, December 14 from 10.30am to 6.30pm.

The Lifblood team will then be at the Greek Orthodox Community Hall on Twentyfirst Street in Renmark on Wednesday, December 15 from 11.30am

Ultra event in Loxton this weekend

STEPHANIE THOMPSON

COMPLETING a 6.7km loop around town on the hour, every hour – by foot – will be the challenge for 60 people taking part in a unique event coming to Loxton for the first time this weekend.

Loxton will host the Hysterical Carnage Backyard Ultra, which will get under way this Friday at 10am.

Ultra Series SA and former local Shaun Kaesler said the beauty of the event is its unknown finishing time, given it only ends when one competitor remains.

"You don't know whether it's going to go for 24 or 48 hours," he said.

"The current Aussie record is 51 hours."

The route will start near the Loxton Riverfront Holiday Park, go up the side of the hill known as 'Heaven', down Sophie Edington Drive, through a trail, around the Loxton Historical Village and back along the river near Grant Schubert Drive.

Riverlanders Annette Aston, Nadene Gillett and Naomi Miatke will take part in the event alongside competitors from Adelaide, Western Australia and Tasmania.

"This is an affiliated event and part of a world series, so people from all over the world will follow this live," Mr Kaesler said.

"We have at least two of the top three runners in the country coming over for it."

Mr Kaesler said the event poses a similar mental and physical challenge.

"Backyard Ultra is open to so many different abilities – you can just be a fast hiker and go a lot further than a fast 5km runner might be able to," she said.

"A 5km runner could be exhausted in five laps, (so) this whole format is a mental game."

As a former Riverlander, Mr Kaesler said he was looking forward to bringing the event to Loxton and watching it grow each year.

"At every opportunity we can... we try and take as many into the regional areas as possible," he said.

"Loxton has a good piece of my heart there and I wanted to bring something back to the economy."

Toy run weeks away

STEPHANIE THOMPSON

THE roar of 200 motorbikes will be heard throughout the Riverland again in less than a month as riders embark on a special Christmas run.

The Ulysses Club Mallee Branch will hold the Riverland Toy and Tucker Run on Sunday, December 5, collecting toys and donations for the Riverland Christmas Appeal.

Ulysses Club Mallee Branch secretary David Moore said the event is enjoyable for all ages.

people to get out,” he said.

Riders have the opportunity to start at either end of the Riverland, departing from Renmark and Waikerie.

All riders will gather at Loxton before stopping at Berri and continuing on to finish at Barmera.

Last year, about 200 motorcycles took part in the event and raised $4000, in addition to a vanload of toys and non-perishable food.

Riders are expected to arrive at the Barmera Main Street Markets at about 11.30am.

The Ulysses Club Mallee Branch is open to riders aged 40 years or over and the group meet each Sunday morning, with organised rides throughout the year.

How Cancer Council SA's new integrated cancer building will look upon completion.

Riverland Water's Cancer Council SA donation

THE Riverland Water Project – which delivers drinking water to approximately 150,000 people – has made a $10,000 donation to Cancer Council SA's new, integrated cancer building.

A once-in-a-generation project for Cancer Council SA, the building will – when completed in August 2022 – combine cancer research, prevention and support alongside 120 rooms of supportive accommodation for regional and remote South Australians impacted by cancer.

The $10,000 donation will fund the building's ground floor kitchen, which provides meals to guests staying in Adelaide for cancer treatment.

Riverland Water chair, Vincent Tremaine, said the consortium was proud to be able to support “such an important project for regional South Australians impacted by cancer”.

“We know that Cancer Council SA provides more than 3000 nights of accommodation to Riverland residents every year which just shows how crucial this service is to those in our community,” Mr Tremaine said.

“This visionary new project from Cancer Council SA will ensure that Riverland residents impacted by cancer receive the services and supports they need for generations to come.”

Cancer Council SA chief executive Kerry Rowlands said the kitchen was a vital support service for guests during their stay.

“At times during treatment, guests who would normally like to cook their own meals are simply too exhausted to do so,” she said.

“The main kitchen allows guests to have a meal prepared for them which they can share with others in a welcoming and supportive environment. Through doing something as simple as sharing a meal together, guests can find support and connection and share experiences with others who know what they’re going through.”

Located at 202 Greenhill Road, Eastwood, and supported by a $10 million state government donation, the building will be the state's first integrated cancer centre.

Ms Rowlands thanked Riverland Water for its donation.

For more information on the project visit the website (202greenhill.com.au).

Labor promises a $2m nature-based tourism boost

A LABOR government would provide grants to small nature-based businesses to boost tourism and experiences in South Australian national parks.

The grants – valued between $10,000 and $50,000 – would be offered to businesses looking to expand their current offerings, train staff to engage with people about the natural world, increase marketing reach and invest in transport infrastructure.

The vast majority of SA's tourism operators are small to medium businesses, which would have been hit hard by the travel restrictions during the pandemic.

SA Labor Leader, Peter Malinauskas, said South Australia was “blessed” with world-class nature-based tourism offerings and Labor wanted to see the sector booming once again.

“After a tough couple of years, it's important that we offer a helping hand to SA's small and medium-sized businesses so they can capitalise on the re-opening of borders and the return of interstate and international tourists,” Mr Malinauskas said.

“This won't only help support local businesses but support local jobs.”

Opposition spokesperson for environment and water, Susan Close, said tourists look for unique experiences in South Australia.

“South Australia has an unrivalled offering when it comes to nature-based tourism,” Ms Close said.

“But we want to make sure local businesses can put their best foot forward when it comes to attracting as many visitors as possible to see our natural wonders.”

Riverland leads way in combating GP shortage

JOSH BRINE

THE rural chair of a national college of general practitioners has been “inspired” by the Riverland's efforts to combat doctor shortages and improve local medical training.

Dr Michael Clements, of the Royal Australian College of General Practitioners, met with GPs and other medical staff in Waikerie and Berri last week to discuss local issues with the health system while preparing a submission for an ongoing Senate inquiry into the provision of rural and remote health services.

Dr Clements said the Riverland Mallee Coorong Local Health Network's (RMCLHN) new Riverland Academy of Clinical Excellence (RACE) initiative was “very exciting and very promising”.

“The RMCLHN is launching a new integrated training curriculum where they give very junior doctors long-term placements within rural general practices and they are encouraging the GPs to work with the hospitals in a partner arrangement...” he said

“Where there's been good leadership and good understanding of how to work with the state government and the GPs, we are seeing pockets of inspiration and good news stories, and the Riverland is absolutely a good news story for South Australia.

“I'm quite inspired, to be frank.”

Dr Clements said the region was also leading the way when it came to arrangements for GPs working in local hospitals, despite ongoing contract negotiations with SA Health remaining a “hot topic” for Riverland doctors.

“SA Health has a very unusual approach to rural hospital management where each different region can have a different arrangement,” he said.

“What that means is some towns are doing really well while others are struggling.

“The Riverland model is excellent and I think they are onto a good thing.

“They are working with GPs, instead of in competition with them, and I think that's going to do well for the Riverland.

“But SA Health needs to listen and learn from this region and apply those lessons elsewhere, because the contracts really are underpaying GPs compared to what a rural GP would expect when working in a hospital interstate.”

Dr Clements said recruitment of the “next wave” of Riverland GPs was an important issue for the local healthcare workers he had spoken to.

“As a general rule, many rural GPs are approaching retirement and we don't have enough influx of medical students and junior doctors choosing general practice as their career,” he said.

Dr Clements said general practices were still feeling the impacts of the freezing of indexation on Medicare funding by the federal government in previous years.

“Medicare from the federal government is what usually funds general practice and sometimes we charge gaps on top of that, but the federal government has been holding funding back with the Medicare freeze,” he said.

“Year on year they've been putting less money into general practice and more money into hospitals.

“When there's underfunding it's very hard to recruit.

“The new doctors look at the pay on offer and they look at the lifestyle.

“If the pay and conditions are far below what they could get by staying at the Royal Adelaide Hospital, it's very difficult to compete.

“With less and less people coming out and wanting to fill those rosters and to contribute to those general practices and hospital work, general practices are relying on locums more which ironically is more expensive...”

“I met with a group of very junior doctors who talk of their enjoyment and love of the Riverland region, but we need to keep them inspired and we need to have flexible arrangements that enable that.”

Organic award continues Angove's recent run of success

A RIVERLAND winery was recognised as an international exporter via a major win in an industry awards night on Friday.

Family-owned, fifth-generation Angove Family Winemakers is one of only a handful of wineries in major global markets to be certified organic.

With strong growth in sales and recent expanding market opportunities, the winery was awarded Exporter of the Year at the Australian Organic Industry Awards.

Angove joint managing director, Richard Angove, said the family was thrilled to win the award.

“The extra time and effort the team have put into growing the grapes, crafting the wines, packaging and then distributing them to global markets has been truly worthwhile,” Mr Angove said.

“Being recognised like this means the industry is acknowledging that what we are doing is beneficial to the organic sector, we know it is beneficial for our vineyards and the environment.”

Now in its 15th year of farming and making wine under the organic certification, Angove is certified to Australian, US, Canadian, European Union and Chinese organic standards.

Mr Angove explained that certified organic grape growing and winemaking meant going “over and above” what others in the wine industry are doing.

“As well as crafting wine made from grapes grown without synthetic chemical intervention, being certified organic also means we adhere to strict organic protocol standards every step of the way and are independently audited each year,” he said.

“Most importantly holding organic certification means we are preserving and improving our precious resources for future generations.”

The award comes on the back of Angove's other recent award successes, winning Distiller of the Year for St Agnes Distillery at the Tasting Australia Spirit Awards, and the Icons Award for the Medhyk Shiraz at the McLaren Vale Wine Show.

CAMPSITES around Lake Bonney are being progressively closed as the Berri Barmera Council undertakes major upgrades of camping infrastructure around the lake.

Contractors Altitude Earthworks commenced work on the campsites on October 18, with works to continue through to mid-March 2022.

Apex Park, which is being used by contractors to store equipment, will be off limits to the public for the duration of the works.

Council CEO Karyn Burton said workers would move around the lake undertaking track rationalisation and campsite formation works.

“As far as I know everything is going according to plan,” she said.

“That will be great once that all gets done.”

While the project was still awaiting Section 21 and 23 approval from the state government as of the last meeting of the Lake Bonney Caring for Country Advisory Group, it was granted permission to begin works by the River Murray and Mallee Aboriginal Corporation (RMMAC).

The upgrades to camping grounds will be accompanied by a new booking management system.

The Lake Bonney Caring for Country Management Plan also covers vegetation, weed and pest management and cultural heritage conservation.

Last month, council applied for about $1.3m in federal government funding through the Murray-Darling Healthy Rivers Program for stage two of its management plan.

If successful, the grant would fund a range of actions including more than $400,000 in trail construction, about $230,000 in contractor costs and $190,000 in fencing.

The Waikerie Bowling Club's new dome was officially opened last month.

Watts up? Night summer sport in the Riverland

LAWN bowls at night is not new – most clubs have conducted social “night owls” competitions during the week for years.

It is a way to attract newcomers to the sport and at the same time boost club coffers.

But last Friday night a fair dinkum round of Riverland pennant bowls was played under the new dome at the Waikerie Bowling Club.

Pennant bowls has long been a Saturday staple, even if the flannels and the natural tifdwarf or tifgreen couch are a thing of the past.

The latter two have been replaced by coloured clothing and slick artificial surfaces; a bit like World Series Cricket but without Kerry Packer.

While conditions were unseasonably cool on Friday night the LED lighting under the dome was exceptional, aimed at the roof, diffused and casting little or no shadow.

This venue will become even more significant when our hot summer days arrive.

If such a traditional sport as bowls can evolve from the days of Sir Francis Drake at Plymouth, Hove, in 1588 to Waikerie in 2021 then it should be a snip for other Riverland summer sports.

And that it is.

Basketball in my time has come from being played under swinging lights strung over outside concrete courts to state-of-the-art, air-conditioned indoor stadiums that have multi-use capability.

Tennis will move next month to play on Friday nights under lights to also escape postponement of rubbers due to excessive heat.

The cut-off is 38C and many summer Saturday afternoons exceed this limit.

It seems only the flannelled fools at the wicket on the village green are lagging, but this too may soon change.

Loxton Oval is now lit to night cricket standards for regional play – illuminated to 200 lux in the outfield and 300 lux at the wicket.

For comparison, lighting in a well-lit office is 300-500 lux – not that I am encouraging anyone to play cricket at work, but you get the picture.

Junior cricket is set to trial mid-week night cricket at Loxton in the near future and with Renmark Oval soon to be lit to the same standard who knows what will follow.

However, with two venues, it would seem to be a natural progression to night matches, or twilight fixtures, or both.

Weekend summer sports in the Riverland have long been threatened by the sweltering summer sun and the siren song of our beautiful stretch of the Murray River, but with so much on offer during the week we can have the best of both worlds.

Glossop spirit comes to Barmera

ORGANISERS have hailed a ‘Glossop comes to Barmera’ display last week as “a tremendous success”.

Up to 70 people visited the Barmera Soldiers’ Memorial Hall during the three-day display, which ended on Saturday.

The exhibit – timed to coincide with Glossop’s centenary – was originally intended to be staged at Glossop Primary School earlier in the year, before Covid-19 restrictions forced a cancellation, then re-programming.

“We were thrilled with the number of people who visited in the three days it was open...” said spokesperson Annie Berriman.

“And the majority of people spent a lot of time looking at the display and chatting to others, not just in and out with a cursory glance.

“We even had two sets of people come from Adelaide to specifically see this, which blew us away.”

The display featured a range of old photographs of Glossop’s schools, community events and landmarks, plus information and newspaper clippings covering the town’s history.

“We may only be a small committee but we aimed high and achieved more than we could have imagined,” Ms Berriman said.

“Special thanks for this display must go to Marg Staker, as without her dedication this would not have been what it is.”

Several of the people involved in display, including Ms Berriman, backed up by attending a Barmera centenary dinner at the Barmera Hotel on Saturday night.

Debbie Lawson, of Glossop, Meredith Green, of Loveday, and Andrew Lawson, of Glossop.

Barmera's living history on dinner menu

KEY figures in Barmera's civic history were among those to attend a one-off centenary dinner last Saturday night.

Held – fittingly – at the Barmera Hotel, the dinner attracted about 80 people, and was hosted in an informal manner by Berri Barmera Mayor, Peter Hunt.

It was the latest in a series of events being staged during 2021 to mark the milestone.

Mr Hunt invited a long list of significant locals up to speak about their involvement with the town, including former Barmera mayors Brian Caddy and Mary Ridley.

Mr Caddy initially mentioned his election contest against fellow well-known locals Rocky Page and Syd Fletcher, his involvement with Donald Campbell's world speed record attempt on Lake Bonney in 1964, and other Barmera memories. Later in the night, flanked by his daughter Monique Gillespie, he talked about his involvement with the local water ski, yachting and Apex clubs, and the Lake Bonney Advisory Committee.

"I wouldn't want to live anywhere else," Mr Caddy said.

Beloved former Barmera Primary School administrator Glenys Frost spoke about her school years, while town servant Robert Drogemuller covered a range of topics, including the Barmera Town Improvement Committee, his time as a Barmera councillor, Guy Fawkes Day and "the Laffer Street kids".

Lifelong Barmera resident John Beech, who was born at Lady Weigall Hospital in 1938, followed Mr Drogemuller and spoke about town identities, and his family's involvement with Barmera.

person Helen Barney was next on the mic, outlining the centenary planning and celebrations through the year. She also paraded a Berri Barmera Sports Shield, restored for the centenary year.

Berri Barmera Council library manager Peter Ison and the council's centenary project officer Christine Webster each made brief speeches, before co-ordinator of the centenary windows display, Julie Krollig, gave a rundown of how the windows project – which has involved previously vacant shop fronts in Barmera – came about and was delivered.

Mrs Krollig said the project involved over 50 adults and up to 350 school children, and that the displays would remain in place until January 2022.

Barmera Primary School stalwart Glenys Matthews was next up, while Ms

Ridley, who was Barmera's final mayor, was the last of the guest speakers.

Ms Ridley spoke about her memories of Loveday World War II prisoners picking fruit on local blocks and of Barmera's annual Easter carnival.

Throughout the evening Mr Hunt shared some of his own memories of Barmera, often touching on his local government experience.

He also thanked representatives from Glossop's centenary celebrations for attending the Barmera event, and acknowledged all those who played a part in organising Barmera's centenary events.

Berri Barmera deputy mayor Ella Winnall, along with fellow elected members Rhonda Centofanti and Meta Sindos were among those to attend the dinner.

Resident's roof rage in Waikerie

A WAIKERIE woman is continuing her campaign to have work carried out on a local building's roof, which she believes is unsafe.

Rosie Reiss claims the currently unused building, located on McCoy Street, is "dangerous", in particular its roof.

Ms Reiss has made multiple submissions to the Loxton Waikerie council about the building, which formerly housed a bakery.

"The most dangerous section of this site is the roof, something the Loxton Waikerie council refuses to identify or confirm," she says in a letter to the editor in today's Murray Pioneer.

warning about the building.

The Murray Pioneer was this week unable to gain comment from the council about the building.

Town honours its last WWII veteran

CHRISTINE WEBSTER

BLANCHETOWN's last surviving World War II veteran, Clyde Wilson, was the guest of honour at the local RSL's Remembrance Day service last Thursday.

The Blanchetown RSL Committee's history member, Anthony McLean, came up with the idea of inviting Mr Wilson to the service, which was attended by 30 people.

Mr McLean said the town previously had about 12 World War II veterans and sadly Mr Wilson was the only one still alive.

Among those who attended the Remembrance Day service in Blanchetown were local primary school students and Mr Wilson's son Grant and daughter-in-law, Margaret, of Adelaide.

The 98-year-old's grandchildren and great grandchildren from Clare also attended, as did former Blanchetown business operator, 91-year-old Aileen Herrmann.

Mr McLean presented Mr Wilson with a Department of Veterans Affairs Certificate, which acknowledges his service to the Royal Australian Airforce in World War II.

The returned soldier was born in Swan Reach, and now lives in a nursing home in Adelaide, where his son Grant – who also served in the RAAF – resides with his wife.

Mr McLean said it was important Australia's former World War II veterans who are still alive are honoured and recognised.

"As I presented the certificate to Clive, I spoke to him and said 'We acknowledge, we honour and we thank you for your service'," he said.

Mr McLean said World War II veterans like Mr Wilson rarely spoke about the trauma they experienced while serving their country in conflict.

"They came home and they came home silently," Mr McLean said.

Mr Wilson enlisted in the RAAF on June 1942, at the age of 18.

He trained in bases and airfields across Australia, in South Australia, Victoria and Queensland and served in the Asia Pacific region.

His first overseas active duty service was with the 5th Airfield Construction Squadron in March 1943 and his second active duty tour was with the 7th Airfield Construction Squadron.

Mr Wilson served in Labuan in Malaysia, Morotai in Indonesia and in Papua New Guinea.

He volunteered to continue his service until January 10, 1946, when he returned to Australia and was discharged on February 19, 1946.

Mr Wilson returned to live and work in the Riverland, where he met his wife Betty who he married in 1951, before they settled in Blanchetown.

Betty died in 2016.

Mr McLean said Mr Wilson has become the Blanchetown RSL's patron.

He said the WWII veteran had unintentionally let his RSL membership lapse, but this will be rectified by the Blanchetown RSL.

"I have filled in a form for Clyde to be a member again and have an RSL membership," he said. "So, I have sent that to the president and we are going to fund that and have that rushed through."

HUGH SCHUITEMAKER

UNFAVOURABLE weather failed to stop Riverlanders from commemorating their past and present military servicemen last week.

More than 100 locals attended Renmark's Remembrance Day service held at the Renmark Institute last Thursday, while other Riverland towns also hosted successful commemorations.

Renmark RSL sub-branch president Peter Higgs said the ceremony was held indoors due to strong winds and cold temperatures.

"There was a last-minute change due to the weather... but otherwise we were happy to be inside," Mr Higgs said.

"We have a lot of elderly people who attend the ceremony, I didn't want them outside in this weather.

"We made the call early in the morning to do it inside."

Renmark Paringa Mayor Neil Martinson said ensuring annual Remembrance Day services could be held was crucial for local communities.

"When we take events away due to Covid-19, it makes it harder to pick them back up afterwards," Mr Martinson said.

"It's important we keep the tradition going, especially for the young kids. We've got a lot of kids coming from the schools and as (RSL member) Ray Hartigan said they will be running the show in the future."

Displays of handmade poppies – co-ordinated by local woman Sherrie Axon – were also set up at the Cross of Sacrifice and Taylor Riverfront Precinct in Renmark.

Mr Higgs said local youth played an increasingly important role in Renmark's military commemorations, with Renmark Primary School student wellbeing leader Renee Smith giving an address, and students from local schools laying wreaths.

"It was great to hear Renee's observations about how the students worked leading up to Remembrance Day," Mr Higgs said.

"As the years go on, you actually notice the youth attending more and more.

"It's important the younger generation have an understanding and continue to carry on Remembrance Day traditions in the future."

Renmark woman, and widow of Vietnam war veteran Trevor Smith, Marianne Smith (left), and Renmark Paringa Mayor Neil Martinson, both laid wreaths during the ceremony.

Local joins landscape board team

A RIVERLAND local is among three new members to join the Murraylands and Riverland Landscape Board (MRLB) team recently.

Joining the team are Ilyth Burton, Julie Schofield and Alice Woodward.

Ms Burton, who moved back to the region for the role, has joined the education team and will be based at the MRLB office in Berri.

After volunteering in youth engagement roles, Ms Burton – who studied Environmental Policy and Management at the University of Adelaide – said she felt fortunate to build her career in the region she grew up in.

"I'm enthusiastic about sustainability and working alongside young people in an educational role," Ms Burton said.

Ms Schofield – based in the Murray Bridge office with Ms Woodward – also joined the education team and said she was "lucky to work on a lot of different environmental jobs".

"During this work I realised how important clear communication is in the environmental field," she said.

Also joining the Landscape Board's education team with Ms Burton is Julie Schofield, pictured with a quokka.

"I'm looking forward to combining my two passions of communication of science and conservation/sustainability."

Ms Woodward will work with the citizen science team and said she was looking forward to working with the community in projects across the region.

The education team is supported by the MRLB through landscape levy funding, while the citizen science team is supported by levies and the South Australian Museum citizen science grant.

Birth service worries mount

WORRY is growing among doctors in Waikerie that birthing services, which have been suspended for nearly a year, may never return to the town, it has been claimed.

Rural chair of the Royal Australian College of General Practitioners, Dr Michael Clements, said belief that an ongoing suspension of birthing services at the Waikerie Health Service, which began in January, would become permanent.

"The GPs are quite concerned that the birthing services have stopped for so long," he said.

"Sadly, what we've seen elsewhere around the country is that the longer a service stays closed the harder it is to reopen.

"It's very worrisome that unless we see some action soon to reinstate the service – and I understand it's mainly a workforce issue, particularly midwifery – then actually it may never reopen."

The temporary suspension of birthing services at the health service due to staff shortages was initially expected to run until March, but this was extended indefinitely by the Riverland Mallee Coorong Local Health Network (RMCLHN) following difficulties with recruiting specialist staff.

In February, RMCLHN CEO Wayne Champion said the low number of births at the service – about 30 per year – could have been impacting the ability to recruit midwifery staff.

In September, Mr Champion said the network was exploring "alternative" birthing models of care.

"The Covid-19 pandemic and unprecedented demand for health-care workers across Australia has provided additional challenges in our ability to recruit appropriately trained staff to support the provision of health services," Mr Champion said.

"A recruitment process is underway to attract the specialised staff that are needed to provide safe birthing services at Waikerie Hospital."

The hospital continues to provide antenatal and postnatal care, plus a range of other health services including acute services, emergency services, mental health support, community health services and residential aged care.

Meat to please you: Proud Riverland butchers recognised at SA awards

ELYSE ARMANINI

A NUMBER of Riverland butchers were recognised at the recent meat industry state awards held last month, with one named as South Australia's top regional retailer.

Riverland Country Style Meats, Plaza Quality Meats, Berri North Meat Store, Warburton's Butchers and Rollbusch Quality Meats all received awards at the Australian Meat Industry Council's SA Industry Awards on Saturday, October 30.

Riverland Country Style Meats operator Brett Gebhardt – whose shop won the regional Retailer of the Year award – said he was proud of the achievement.

"I can't believe we actually got the best regional butcher in South Australia," he said.

Riverland Country Style Meats also received gold for its lamb shank pie – for the second year in a row – plus two bronze awards for a maple-infused smoked leg ham, and cheesy kabana.

"To be honest, the leg ham is a big accolade," Mr Gebhardt said.

"I've only been smoking leg hams for the last 12 months, so to get third best in South Australia is quite a step forward for me."

Mr Gebhardt said he was "quite proud" of all Riverland butchers that received recognition.

"In our region, we've got a whole consortium of great butchers who are really passionate about their jobs," he said.

"It's a step in the right direction for us (butchers) in the Riverland and I am really proud to be part of that."

Berri-based Plaza Quality Meats received silver in its first-ever entry for a beef and pork bratwurst sausage, while Berri North Meat Store received silver for its parsley, onion and pepper poultry, and mild pepperoni salami entries.

Warburton's Butchers Renmark received silver for its traditional pork sausage and, in the open gourmet category, its pork belly and apple cider sausage.

Rollbusch Quality Meats – based in Waikerie and Barmera – received gold for its rind-on bacon rasher, claiming the title of best bacon in the state, as well as bronze for its Memphis turkey burger.

Rollbusch Quality Meats owner Nigel Rollbusch said he and his team were overjoyed to win against "massive companies" from across the state.

"I was seriously a little bit surprised... we definitely celebrated," Mr Rollbusch said. "It was pretty good for all of the Riverland butchers who made it to state."

"We didn't get to (give a speech), but I would've liked to congratulate all of the other butchers."

Jobs secure in radio acquisition

ALL jobs are secure at Riverland Broadcasters, soon to become part of the giant ARN metro radio network.

Riverland Broadcasters, which includes 5RM and Magic 93.1, is currently owned and operated by national company Grant Broadcasters, but a major acquisition deal – announced just days ago – will see Grants acquired by Australia’s number one radio network.

ARN (Australian Radio Network) will acquire 46 of Grant Broadcasters’ stations, comprising 38 FM stations and eight AM stations, including all Berri-based Riverland Broadcasters operations.

The $307m acquisition effectively means an amalgamation of ARN and one of Australia’s oldest regional radio companies.

Addressing the question of potential redundancies, ARN said integration planning would be undertaken in the coming weeks and months, but noted that the acquisition of Grants Broadcasters was “not a cost-synergy exercise” and that both businesses were “exceptionally well-run”.

“The station brands Grant Broadcasters have created have served their local communities with great commitment for decades, playing a pivotal role in the lives of their audiences, and we look forward to continuing that tradition,” said ARN CEO Ciaran Davis.

“(Our) commitment to live and local content is completely unwavering.”

ARN said local breakfast shows and “talent in all markets” would be maintained.

Among other local offerings, Magic 93.1 currently airs the Brooke & Bob show each morning, while Anthony Milich hosts 5RM’s breakfast show.

Grant Broadcasters CEO Alison Cameron will join the board of HT&E, parent company of ARN, with Grants Broadcasters stakeholders taking a 20 per cent holding in HT&E.

“There is a strong cultural similarity between the two businesses, with both ARN and Grant committed to expertly creating great local content for the communities we serve,” Ms Cameron said.

“Together we’ll be a dedicated team of audio professionals, who live and breathe our local audiences.

“Both our companies are profitable enterprises in their own right but this partnership will deliver scale, digital acceleration, and ensures our future profitability.”

ARN’s brands include KIIS, Pure Gold, The Edge and iHeartRadio.

The KIIS network includes Kyle & Jackie O (Sydney), and Erin Phillips and Soda on Adelaide’s Mix102.3.

The KIIS national drive show across all stations is Will & Woody.

ARN said Grants Broadcasters’ networked shows, which are primarily from Nine Radio and Nova Entertainment, would be replaced by shows from ARN’s content slate.

No stations will be rebranded in the acquisition, with the transaction set to be finalised by November 30.

Two Riverland Broadcasters employees are among nominees for the upcoming 32nd Australian Commercial Radio Awards (ACRAs).

Tim’s warning on river safety

A RIVERLAND MP has urged locals and holiday visitors to the region to ensure all safety measures are followed when using the River Murray.

Royal Life Saving Australia recently released its 2021 National Drowning Report, showing rivers remained the leading location for drownings across the nation.

Chaffey MP Tim Whetstone described figures in the report as “alarming”, with a total of 294 drowning deaths occurring in Australia compared to 248 last year.

“The report demonstrates the ongoing need to educate all age groups about the importance of water safety,” Mr Whetstone said.

“As a community, water safety is at the forefront of safety messages, particularly in the Riverland.

“The River Murray can often be unpredictable, and it is vital that everyone, be it local or visitor, follows the instructions on signage along waterways.

“We are fortunate to be surrounded by the Murray River, and we want to encourage tourists and families to visit, but it’s vital we continue to reinforce the importance of being smart and safe around water.”

Mr Whetstone said high water flows – of approximately 30,000ML/day into South Australia during October – increased the dangers associated with river use.

“It’s vital we spread the message about water safety and awareness along the Murray River, particularly in this time of high river flows, as we head into summer,” he said.

“I urge people to respect the river and to be aware that although it may look inviting on the surface, the flow and depth can be deceiving.”

Ian on board with Accolade

HUGH SCHUITEMAKER

A LONG-time local winegrape expert's knowledge will continue to benefit the region's growers as part of the Riverland's largest winery.

Accolade Wines earlier this month announced Ian Macrae (pictured) had joined the organisation's viticulture team, based at Berri Estates.

An Accolade Wines spokesperson said Mr Macrae's knowledge of Riverland winegrape growing techniques would be crucial for the local industry.

"We're delighted to have Ian join our viticulture team based in Berri Estates," the spokesperson said.

"His many years of experience, particularly in the Riverland, are a huge asset to Accolade Wines.

"Ian's appointment signals our sustained investment in the Riverland and across South Australia.

"He'll play an important role as a member of our broader viticulture team that helps us deliver our award-winning portfolio of Australian wine brands, such as Hardys and Berri Estates, to the world."

Mr Macrae was the senior viticulturalist for CCW until his role was made redundant by the company in August.

It is understood Mr Macrae's availability to CCW growers is now restricted to matters directly related to Accolade Wines at Berri Estates.

CCW: Tension mounts between co-op and its grape-grower members

'IT'S A SHAMBLES'

HUGH SCHUITEMAKER At least 80 CCW-contracted growers recently wrote to the organisation's directors to call for a special general meeting, to be held in the dark so much, we can't really put our fingers on it," they said. However, the growers said the CCW membership base wanted Mr Macrae's role to be made redundant last month.

Concept designs of the proposed memorial plinths for musicians and ex-Riverland residents Ruby Hunter and Archie Roach.

Lake Bonney plinths for indigenous pair

A PROPOSAL to build plinths – costing around $5000 – in Barmera memorialising two prominent indigenous singers and former Riverland residents will go to the Berri Barmera Council after being endorsed by the town's improvement committee.

Two memorials dedicated to the late Ruby Hunter and her widower Archie Roach, who both used to live in Barmera, are proposed to be placed on the Lake Bonney foreshore.

The Ruby Hunter Memorial Committee will also create a fundraising account to "help pay for the memorials and their continued upkeep".

Ms Hunter and Mr Roach's plinths will each feature their totem animals, the pelican and wedge-tailed eagle respectively.

At its November 4 meeting, the Barmera Improvement Committee voted to endorse and recommend the project to council.

In a letter to the committee on behalf of the Ruby Hunter Memorial Committee, local historian Rosemary Gower said Ms Hunter and Mr Roach's advocacy and volunteer work, as well as their musical careers, made them worthy of memorials.

"Over the years, Ruby and Archie became volunteer carers for over 30 young Aboriginal boys who were at risk, providing a roof over their heads, food on the table, and clothes on their backs, all out of their own pockets," she said.

"They gave them a sense of security and a pride in their heritage...

"Ruby's dream was to help young indigenous boys and girls to achieve success in the entertainment industry.

"As a consequence, after her death, her family established the Ruby Hunter Foundation, to raise money to help young talented Aboriginal people reach their full potential and achieve their goal.

"Ruby has been widely acknowledged for her unique talent in the entertainment industry by being presented with many awards, some of which were posthumous, and inducted into numerous halls of fame."

A Ngarrindjeri woman, Ms Hunter was born in Renmark and years later returned to the region, living in Barmera and Monash before moving to Victoria.

Ms Hunter died of a heart attack in 2010, aged 54.

Local teacher's top state honour

ELYSE ARMANINI

THE Riverland officially has the best secondary teacher in South Australia, with the winner announced at the annual education awards recently.

Renmark High School (RHS) teacher, Jodi Long, was named Secondary Teacher of the Year – together with a teacher from Brighton Secondary School – at the 2021 South Australian Public Education Awards on Friday, November 5.

The awards recognise the achievements of teachers, leaders, allied health professionals and corporate staff across the state.

Ms Long has taught secondary students for 18 years, spending the past 13 years at RHS as a visual art and digital media teacher, which she was inspired to become by her high school art teacher.

Her award nomination came from RHS principal Mat Evans, followed by multiple support statements from Ms Long's colleagues and former students in the lengthy application process.

"We had to provide evidence of what we've done in the past couple of years to really open up learning opportunities for students," Ms Long said.

"A lot of that, for me, was about future pathways and providing students with the skills and knowledge to be industry professionals."

Ms Long said she hoped to use the $10,000 prize money to expand her skills in the Adobe app suite and graphic design.

"There's an Adobe summit that they run each year and it varies where it is each year," she said. "I would really like to attend because there are some really amazing keynote speakers and workshops they run on the Adobe apps."

"I'd also like to work with a local entrepreneur, Ebony Forsyth. She runs her own graphic design business and she's recently just started a business course where she works with young students."

Ms Long said her students are "her passion" and what she enjoys most about being a teacher.

"Just seeing them come into the space and seeing their creativity grow," she said.

"I am so lucky because I normally pick them up in year 8 and see them through to year 12."

"Just watching that growth and seeing them build their passion for what they're doing – that's what I'm most passionate about."

New principal appointed at Riverland Christian school

A RIVERLAND school recently announced its new leadership structure for next year.

Jessica Richards will take on the role of principal at Rivergum Christian College, commencing in January.

Ms Richards said she was excited to join the school community next year, after being an educator for 15 years and a principal for nine years in both government and Christian schools.

"I'm convinced that a learning environment which provides high-quality teaching and learning, as well as one which partners with parents in helping to form a child's identity and character, is a school which provides young people with the very best starting life," Ms Richards said in a video statement posted on YouTube.

"I believe Rivergum Christian College is that school. I look forward to meeting each of you and getting to know you as we journey together to see your children enter their full God-given potential."

Current acting principal, Christian Grigg, will take on the role as deputy principal.

Rivergum chairperson, Garry Pinnington, congratulated Ms Richards and Miss Grigg on the new appointments.

"Jessica has significant experience in educational leadership and is a passionate and skilled educator, with a heart for education in regional centres," Mr Pinnington said.

"I honour Christan for the exceptional skill and expertise she brings to teaching and learning, staff development and educational leadership, and thank her for the capable leadership she has exemplified under challenging circumstances."

Year 11 and 12s from Rivergum Christian College will celebrate at a formal dinner with parents and staff members at Banrock Station on Friday night.

Starting the year 12 formals, Loxton High School will celebrate at the Loxton Sporting Precinct on Wednesday, November 24.

Renmark High School will follow with its prom at 23rd Street Distillery on Thursday, November 25.

Finishing off the week, Glossop High School will – for the last time – hold its year 12 formal at the school in the gym on Friday, November 26.

Riverland Special School holds its formal on alternate years and will not have an event this year.

Fire danger dates locked in RIVERLANDERS have been urged to clear their properties of bushfire risks after the fire danger season began on Monday.

The CFS last month declared the new fire danger season would run from November 15 to April 15, 2022, in the Riverland.

Chaffey MP Tim Whetstone said ensuring fire risks were removed from homes, vineyards, and orchards, was crucial to protecting the whole community.

“Riverlanders need to prepare their property and make sure they have a bushfire management plan in place,” Mr Whetstone said.

“Vacant properties can present a risk if not appropriately maintained, and it is important that we as a community work with local government to ensure we reduce the risk of fire as much as possible.

“An unprepared property is not only a danger itself but can also present an increased threat for neighbours, and a well-prepared home can be easier for you or firefighters to protect.

“We have all seen the devastation bushfires cause and how quickly they can destroy homes, businesses and life. A bushfire would be devastating in our region, so we need to be vigilant as a community to prevent this from happening.”

CFS deputy chief officer Rob Sandford said wet conditions during winter meant no early start was needed to the fire danger season.

“While parts of South Australia had wetter than average winters, the vegetation around the state will start to cure, bringing fire potential,” Mr Sandford said.

“With no need for any district to start early, as in previous years, there should be no surprises for residents in these districts who have been preparing their properties.”

Mr Whetstone also encouraged any locals seeking to “make a contribution to our community to consider signing up to be a CFS volunteer”.

Further information regarding the South Australian fire danger season can be found by visiting the website (www.cfs.sa.gov.au/bans-and-ratings/fire-danger-season-dates/).

STORM SHOT: Winkie resident Pam Griffin took this photo of the first spring storm that swept over mainly Waikerie and Loxton last last month. Pam is also a member of the Riverland Camera Club.

Chaffey MP Tim Whetstone has urged Riverlanders to support local small businesses impacted by recent hailstorms during the upcoming holiday season.

Storms place extra focus on ‘shop local’ message

THE impacts of devastating storms on the Riverland have made shopping local this Christmas even more important, a local MP says.

Chaffey MP Tim Whetstone has called on Riverland and Mallee residents to support small business and bolster local jobs by shopping local this Christmas, noting that businesses were “relying on the community’s support”.

“This year has been particularly difficult with the pandemic, the recent damaging storms and the seasonal commodity prices,” he said.

“It is our responsibility to support local business owners, many of whom are our neighbours, by committing to shop, eat, and spend locally when possible, especially during the upcoming festive season.”

“We have so many locally-owned businesses with amazing products, services, food, and experiences to offer and these businesses will only survive if we get behind them.”

The region’s economy has taken a hit over the past month with two wild storms – featuring damaging hail and winds – all but wiping out some fruit growers’ crops.

“Every dollar spent at a local business in the lead-up to Christmas is important for the region’s economy,” Mr Whetstone said.

“During this festive season, I am encouraging locals to support small business in the region wherever they can and provide an important financial injection into the local economy.

“Small business owners are the heart and soul of our local communities and many in the Riverland and Mallee are owned and managed by small families and employ local people.”

Mr Whetstone said other opportunities exist to order products in the Riverland and Mallee.

“Many businesses in the region are happy to price match and it’s always worthwhile asking the owners to order in what it is you’re looking for if it’s not on the shop floor,” he said.

“Whether you’re making a start on the Christmas shopping, sending a bottle of wine to a friend or buying a gift voucher, supporting local businesses makes a big difference in our community.

“The positive effects of shopping local are extensive, and the money received by local businesses for their goods or services, for the most part, goes right back into our local community.”

Bringing support to Riverland veterans

VETERANS SA will undertake a two-day outreach visit to the Riverland this week.

The visit has been organised in partnership with local councils and organisations to connect veterans and their families in the Riverland with support services.

The Veterans SA team will be joined by representatives from Australian Partners of Defence (APOD), the Legacy Club of South Australia & Broken Hill, Open Arms, the Partners of Veterans’ Association, Plympton Veterans’ Centre, RSL South Australia and Soldier On, who will be available to local veterans and their families to provide services and support.

The program will also include a Veterans Wellbeing Workshop, with a focus on aged care and planning ahead, presented by RSL Care.

“Our team is excited to connect with and support veterans and their families in the Riverland, as well as local businesses, organisations and the local community,” said Veterans SA director, Catherine Walsh.

“These outreach visits, in partnership with veterans’ organisations and the community, help increase awareness about the opportunities, advice and information available to veterans and their families that best suit their needs and circumstances.

“It is also an important opportunity for Veterans SA to hear feedback directly from our community and to explore areas for improvement in the support offered to the veteran community across the state.”

The Riverland visit begins in Berri tomorrow and will continue in Loxton on Friday.

Take a step to stamp out abuse

DEIRDRE GRAHAM

RIVERLAND men are being urged to call out abuse as the region marks White Ribbon Day, the International Day for the Elimination of Violence Against Women, plus the 16 Days of Activism initiative.

White Ribbon Day will be held this Friday.

Meanwhile the International Day for the Elimination of Violence Against Women is on November 25, which is also the commencement of the 16 Days of Activism that runs until December 10 – also Human Rights Day.

Life Without Barriers Riverland spokesperson Anne Wall said everyone can take a step to stamp out abuse – which she says is on the rise locally.

“There has been a 10 per cent increase in reported cases of domestic violence in the last financial year (across Australia),” Mrs Wall said.

“You would assume from that, given that services have been shut down or working from home, that that real increase is possibly much higher than that.

“Locally, we are certainly hearing from local service providers, through the Riverland Domestic Violence Action Group, that there is an increase in demand for services.”

Mrs Wall said it was time for men to step up.

“Men in general can absolutely contribute to some of our campaigns by calling out abuse,” she said.

“There is a whole lot of work happening around workplaces and assisting people in the workplace around domestic violence.

“Be aware of colleagues who might be getting a lot more phone calls than usual, their partner might be waiting for them when they finish work.

“You might notice different behaviours. You might – apart from the more physical signs such as bruising – see subtle changes in a person’s behaviour that might suggest that something is not quite right at home.”

“We need to teach (students) what respectful relationships look like...

Mrs Wall said men who are perpetrators, or fear they may become one, can also make the decision to receive help.

“What we aim to achieve as a domestic violence action group is to encourage men who are concerned about their behaviours or concerned about their relationships to get help from a local service provider such as Relationships Australia,” Mrs Wall said.

Life Without Barriers and other service groups are holding a breakfast at the Berri Hotel on Thursday, November 25, the International Day for the Elimination of Violence Against Women.

The event will also showcase the artwork of Glossop High School students who have been involved in the Expect Respect program – a joint initiative run by Zonta, SAPOL, Headspace, Riverland Domestic Violence Action Group, and Life Without Barriers.

“If we are going to prevent the scourge of violence that is happening in the community, we need to start with young people,” Mrs Wall said.

“We need to teach them what respectful relationships look like, what is respectful behaviour, and what expectations you should set for yourself and others.

“That was the aim of the program, to give kids some tools and resources around where to get help if they have mental health concerns, if they were concerned about behaviours, or if they had concerns about witnessing inappropriate behaviour or relationships.

“It was about giving them the tools for that, and giving them some tools around resilience – and then they produced some artwork with anti-violence messaging within it.”

The pieces are set to be judged by an art therapist, with 12 to be collated into a 2022 calendar.

The art will also be on show at the November 25 breakfast at the Berri Hotel before being transferred to the Berri Town Hall to be displayed until December 1.

“I believe the project we have been doing at the school is a fantastic step in the right direction,” Mrs Wall said.

“I have been reading quite recently a quote from Desmond Tutu that says ‘we need to stop pulling people out of the river and go upstream and figure out why they are falling in’ which is absolutely what we need to do.

“I feel like we are constantly triaging crises, where if we actually looked at early intervention and prevention we will be much better placed to tackle any of these social issues in comparison to what we have done in the past.

“I feel like the Expect Respect program is a really good thing, and we hope that other schools will come on board and we can do it for years to come.”

Tickets to the Thursday, November 25 breakfast are $20 per head.

It starts at 7.30am and proceeds will be split between Zonta’s Expect Respect program and the White Ribbon movement.

Bookings can be made at <https://www.eventbrite.com.au/e/white-ribbon-breakfast-riverland-tickets-198672784647>.

Big Macs for a big cause

ELYSE ARMANINI

TEAM members at a Renmark fast-food restaurant worked to help raise money for a national fundraising event on Saturday.

Renmark McDonald’s was among more than 1000 outlets nationally to celebrate the 30th year of McHappy Day and fundraise for Ronald McDonald House Charities (RMHC).

Customers had options for contributing, including a donation bucket in the restaurant and $2 from every Big Mac sold on the day going directly to RMHC, plus the option to purchase socks and helping hands since October 20.

Renmark McDonald’s licensee, Emma Burgess, said she hoped this year’s event would raise more awareness for RMHC.

“This is the biggest fundraising initiative for the charity and it’s really important that people understand the reasoning behind McHappy Day and what it does,” Mrs Burgess said.

“RMHC helps seriously ill and injured children and their families stay together.”

The Ronald McDonald House in South Australia is near the Women’s and Children’s Hospital in North Adelaide.

“If one of our kids gets sick and it’s serious, everything stops and you need to race down to Adelaide,” Mrs Burgess said.

“The accommodation, where your next meal is coming from, even the support of other families that are going through something similar, they’re the additional things that RMHC offer.

“You really can’t put a price on that support.”

Berri shed's grand opening

ELYSE ARMANINI

MEMBERS of the Riverland community are invited to attend the official grand opening of a new community building in Berri this month.

Members of the Berri Church of Christ and the Berri Community Men's Shed will officially open the brand-new building, housing the Men's Shed, on Sunday, November 28.

Berri Church of Christ minister, Clinton Wardle, said the two-and-a-half-year project and final building completion was thanks to a combined church and community effort.

"We had fundraisers and markets, where people were very generous and donated good amounts," Mr Wardle said.

The church received $22,000 in funding from the federal government for the building project, as well as $55,000 from "close friends" in Tasmania.

Special guests of honour to cut the ribbon and declare the building officially open include the oldest male and female members of the church, as well as a 93-year-old lady who has been a member of the church "for the longest time".

Berri Barmera Mayor Peter Hunt and Chaffey MP Tim Whetstone will also be in attendance.

Mr Wardle thanked all who "worked hard to get this (project) to this point".

"Thanks to everyone in the community, as well as the church, for contributing to this project financially, by donating goods and labour," he said.

Mr Wardle said the Men's Shed is community-run and focuses on mental health and comradeship.

"It's really (about) men getting together and supporting each other," he said.

The Berri Community Men's Shed group will be officially launched in the new building at a later date.

The building housing the Berri Community Men's Shed will be officially opened at a ceremony involving Berri Barmera Mayor Peter Hunt and Chaffey MP Tim Whetstone, on Sunday, November 28.

Rose Festival fashion show a hit

A FULL house, two dozen models and $1750 raised for Greenhill Lodge.

A fashion parade staged last month as part of the Riverland Rose and Garden Festival was a success by any measure.

Sponsored by Berri Barmera Garden Club, the Second Hand Rose event was held in the garden of Helga Halupka, near Monash, on Sunday, October 24.

Twenty-four models – male and female – across different age groups strutted the runway under the shade of a large Norfolk Island pine tree, showcasing clothing available at the Berri Salvos store.

The fashion parade was divided into different segments, including autumn/winter, spring/summer, and 'after-5 wear'.

"Many models were hesitant about strutting the runway," said organiser Murray Harvey.

"(But) most had a change of heart after the event and wanted to know when the next fashion parade would be and could they put their names forward to participate."

Mr Harvey said he was thrilled with the event's success.

"I could not have been more pleased with all tickets sold, weather suited to being in a garden, and a beautiful garden to wander through after the fashion parade while waiting for Devonshire afternoon tea," he said.

"Helga's garden was full of roses in bloom and an abundance of irises in their peak.

"Devonshire afternoon tea was supplied by the catering members of the Berri

Barmera Garden Club.

"White tablecloths set off a lovely tranquil setting to sit and enjoy afternoon tea. Live music by Bianca Feher was played throughout the afternoon."

MC Joella Crossfield provided a description of fashion worn and a running commentary of each of the models.

Mr Harvey thanked Helga and Gary Halupka for helping him organise the event.

"Generous donations by our local businesses throughout the Riverland helped to keep our expenses low and as a result $1750 was raised for Greenhill Lodge, the country accommodation for cancer victims who need to stay in Adelaide while having treatment," he said.

"A big thank you to all who helped to make this event such a big success."

Tony takes fruit fly issue to national stage

MAINTAINING the Riverland's fruit-fly-free status is a key aspect of new legislation currently in development, according to a local federal MP.

The federal government announced last week the National Biosecurity Committee would develop a strategy aimed at forming a framework for national biosecurity until 2030.

Barker MP Tony Pasin said the consultation would highlight the need for national action to protect the Riverland's pest-free status.

"The rising complexity of Australia's biosecurity environment requires new and innovative approaches for handling biosecurity into the future," Mr Pasin said.

"As the Riverland continues to hurt from fruit fly outbreaks I want to see a nationally co-ordinated strategy in place to protect our nationally important pest free region.

"The national strategy will seek to align collective efforts towards a common purpose and provide a clear commitment to prioritised action and investment.

"We need to ensure Australia's biosecurity system remains fit to meet the challenges of the next decade including against fruit fly here in the Riverland."

Mr Pasin said increased measures were needed to prevent biosecurity threats entering Australia once international borders were opened.

"Strong and efficient biosecurity is even more important as we, and the rest of the world, respond to emerging challenges and recover our economy post-Covid," he said.

Covid claims another Christmas pageant

CHRISTINE WEBSTER

MORGAN'S Community Christmas Pageant has been cancelled due to the uncertainty of SA's Covid-19 restrictions after November 23 and the financial impact of the pandemic.

It is the second year the annual event has been cancelled due to Covid-19.

The SA Government is opening the border on November 23 to vaccinated people from all states and territories.

SA Health has forecast when the state reaches a level of 80 per cent vaccination of those over 16, given current activity restrictions, testing and contact tracing capacity, SA will remain within the state's hospital ward and ICU capacity.

Morgan and District Lions Club president, Laura Williams, said not knowing what would happen in SA after opening the border led to the cancellation of the pageant, scheduled for December 11.

"This decision did not come lightly," she said.

"We can't really predict what is going to happen, but SA Health are already predicting we will be getting cases."

Ms Williams said the Lions Club was also unable to afford to cover the hire costs of a portable fence, which was required to be erected around the river front to regulate attendance, along with a QR code.

She said hiring the fence would have cost about $10,000 and sourcing one could have been difficult.

"Fencing costs a lot of money, so financially we were unable to provide this," Ms Williams said.

She said due to Covid-19, the 12-member Morgan and District Lions Club had also raised less money over the past year.

"We haven't been able to do as much fundraising as we would like," she said.

Ms Williams hoped an outdoor cinema would be held instead on December 11.

However, she said this would depend on Covid-19 restrictions and whether the Morgan and District Lions Club was successful in obtaining a community event grant from Mid Murray Council.

Ms Williams said Santa was also expected to make his usual visits to the Morgan community and children on a CFS truck prior to Christmas Day.

"He visits all the kids at their homes," she said. "Usually the CFS puts the truck's siren on so they know he is in the area."

The legend from Alawoona: Russell Ebert 1949-2021

Well-known Riverlander JOHN GLADIGAU, executive director at Bulla Burra Operations Pty Ltd, near ALAWOONA, has penned the following reflection on ex-local and champion Aussie rules footballer RUSSELL EBERT, who was farewelled with a state funeral in Adelaide yesterday.

RUSSELL Ebert is a legend in an era when the term is thrown around way too loosely.

Four-time Magarey Medallist, three premierships, six best and fairest awards.

Probably the greatest player in the history of SA footy – and in the week before his death rightfully elevated to legend status in the SA Sport Hall of Fame.

And he played for the most hated or loved sports team in the country, depending on where you sat. But even if you hated Port Adelaide with a passion, you still loved Russell Ebert. He was a true champion in every sense of the word. And he was ours.

And everyone claimed him. Berri says he is theirs because he was born there. Loxton claim him because that is where he played his junior footy.

He is "Waikerie's own" because that's where he played senior footy before being picked up by Port Adelaide, who then rightly claimed him for the rest of his life.

Well, they can all claim him as much as they like – but Russell Ebert will always be an Alawoona boy.

It may be just a tiny town in the northern Mallee, current population of about 10 (if they are all home at the same time) and we don't have too many claims to fame – but we can claim to have produced four Magarey Medals.

As Russell himself said on ABC radio earlier this month: "Alawoona used to be a bustling town – but today if a magpie swoops it would be classed as a highlight..."

Yes, we claim him because Alawoona is where he spent his childhood. He lived on the farm next door to ours, and speaks fondly of rabbit trapping, bird nesting and riding his bike on the farm and into town. His father coached the Alawoona footy club to a premiership in 1953, so it's only right to assume that he first picked up a footy and learnt all his early skills that propelled him into being one of the greatest players our country has ever seen in – of all places – Alawoona.

We have a large stone tank on our farm right next to our house, which kind of became the de facto Alawoona swimming pool. It developed cracks and eventually become unusable in the 1960s, which my grandfather apparently put down to "those bloody Ebert kids always coming over and doing dive bombs into it when I wasn't around to tell them off".

It's a great story – and one which I always thought was just an urban myth leveraging off the Ebert name (which I'm happy to perpetuate).

However, several years ago Russell attended a reunion at Alawoona where he spoke fondly of his early days in the area and how it had shaped his life. And during that interview he said something along the lines of: "We sometimes used to sneak over to the Gladigau farm when we knew old Mr Gladigau wasn't home, and we would do dive bombs into their stone tank. I actually think we were the ones who wrecked that tank."

But Russell Ebert isn't just a legend for his sporting prowess. He is a legend for who he was.

Social media is awash today with stories of his community involvement, his kindness, his availability – and his passion to make people see the best in themselves.

And his humbleness. He never sought individual recognition. He was so embarrassed to see a statue of himself in full flight at the gates of Adelaide Oval. It was not his want to be put on a pedestal. He always elevated the achievements of others above himself.

He rightly spoke with passion and pride of his brother Bill, a Loxton icon, who is the absolute epitome of someone completely dedicated to community service and promoting good in others.

Brothers in arms. Bill and Russell owned a houseboat together. It was nothing flash, and not that big.

But it was Russell's hideaway from the city. And, in between time Bill used it to take the oldies from the local retirement home on little river cruises, some who would otherwise never have the opportunity to be on the river.

All voluntary. At no cost. No fanfare. No recognition. That's the Eberts. That's how they roll.

I don't claim to know Russell at all – though I feel I know him well. In many ways, I think that's how most South Aussies would see him.

You can hate Port Adelaide but love Russell Ebert. If you bumped into him, he'd be happy for a chat.

But he would be the one asking about you, what you are doing, and what gives you passion. He still has family connections in Loxton, and occasionally would turn up at our church for a baptism or family gathering – and he was always just one of the crowd. Happy for a chat, but always with the focus on you, not on him.

We have lost a good one.

We can't all have the silky skills and be revered in sporting circles like Russell Ebert. But we can all strive to have a heart, a community passion, and a focus on building up others like him.

Because that is his true legacy.

CFS cadets demonstrate their prowess at Waikerie

CHRISTINE WEBSTER

THE future of the CFS Region 3 branch looks to be in safe hands if it is measured by the performance of participants in the recent cadet championships at Waikerie.

Six teams of four cadets representing Waikerie, Morgan, Taillem Bend and Mannum took part in the annual competition, which was held in Waikerie this year on October 31.

CFS Region 3 state cadet representative, Haylee Campbell, said cadets – ranging in age from 11 to 16 – demonstrated a high standard of skills during the event.

“We had quite a large age difference in a couple of places,” Ms Campbell said.

She said some of the 11-year-old cadets who had only recently joined competed against older cadets who had been involved in the CFS for three or four years.

“Everyone competed really well, we were happy with the events of the day,” Ms Campbell said.

The CFS cadets were assessed on three drills.

The first was a host drill, which required the cadets to connect two lengths of hose from the back of a fire truck and simulate extinguishing a fire, which was represented by orange cones.

The next exercise was a drafting drill involving the location of a water source, which was represented by a collar dam on the Waikerie Pony Club oval.

Water from the collar dam was then used to put out a simulated fire, represented by a drum.

An elephant walk and burn-over drill completed the competition for the cadets. This involved using a sideline hose on the side of a fire truck to extinguish a simulated fire.

The cadets then sheltered down low in the truck, with the fire blinds down, to demonstrate what needs to be done during a dangerous period when the wind changes direction and a fire heads towards them.

The Mannum CFS cadets were the overall winner of the CFS Region 3 Cadet Championships, coming in just ahead of Waikerie.

Ms Campbell said being involved in the CFS cadets program provided young people with valuable life skills.

She said it enabled them to develop skills in working as part of a team, communication and in leadership.

“It is great to have them there and learning off the senior members currently,” Ms Campbell said.

“As you work your way up you can become a lieutenant or a captain or something along those lines.”

From the age of 16, CFS cadets can then enrol in the basic firefighters’ course and, after passing this stage, they can attend fires as a senior firefighter.

“Obviously we limit them depending on what the incident is,” Ms Campbell said.

“We are not going to send them straight out into big jobs.”

Anyone interested in becoming a CFS cadet can contact CFS Region 3 headquarters on 8532 6800.

Building approvals remain elevated

DETACHED building approvals continue to suggest there is still strong demand for housing six months after the Home-Builder stimulus ended in March, according to HIA economist Tom Devitt.

The Australian Bureau of Statistics recently released its monthly building approvals data for detached and multi-units data covering all states and territories.

“Detached building approvals in the three months to September 2021 remain up by 15.5 per cent on the same quarter in 2020 and 32.2 per cent up on the same time in 2019,” Mr Devitt said.

“This will continue to support a healthy pipeline of on-the-ground home building work to the end of next year.

“Leading indicators, including HIA’s new home sales data, suggest that the detached market remains robust despite lockdowns.

“Sales in the three months to September 2021 were not as high as they were a year earlier, when HomeBuilder was gaining momentum, but are still 7.4 per cent higher than at the same time in 2019 and 0.6 per cent higher than the same time in 2018.

“These sales will flow through to approvals data in the coming months and will continue to create employment opportunities into the second half of 2022.

“Approvals for multi-units also strengthened in September. The last three months are now 34.3 per cent up on a year earlier, reflecting an improved trend in 2021.

“Apartment approvals have been improving over the last year or so, led by New South Wales and, to a lesser extent, Queensland and Western Australia. This suggests investors are looking through the haze of the pandemic to a brighter outlook on the other side.

“There has also been increased activity in medium density housing, suggesting this market is also enjoying some of the shift in preferences towards lower density housing.

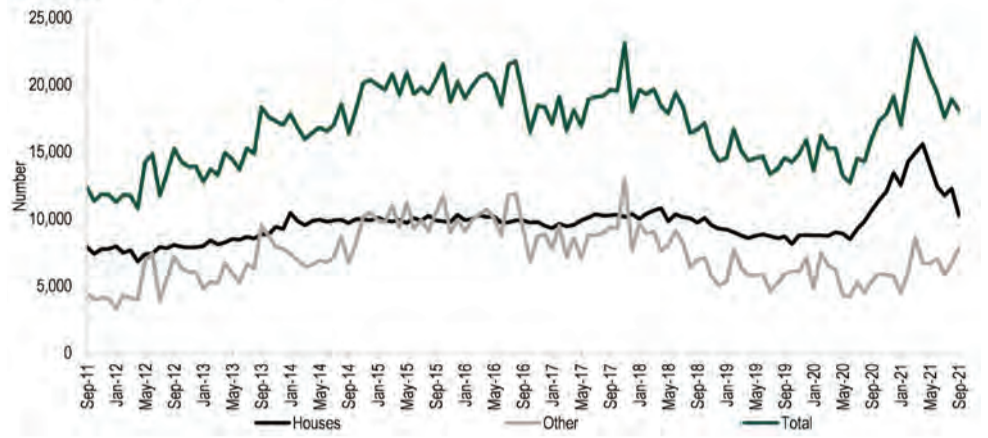

“Strong growth in detached house prices may also be adding to the popularity of medium density living.

“Approvals for renovations also remain elevated. Despite a slight decline in September, the value of these approvals is still up by 10.6 per cent on September 2020, and the last 12 months is still up by 37.5 per cent on the previous year.

“In addition to HomeBuilder, this has been driven by shifts in spending from services like travel, entertainment and dining out, towards housing.

“With Australians spending more time at home and accumulating a significant amount of savings, an increase in demand for larger living spaces is unsurprising.”

In seasonally adjusted terms, total residential building approvals increased in the three months to September 2021 compared to the same time last year in almost all jurisdictions.

New South Wales led the pack (+38.5 per cent), followed by South Australia (+30.5 per cent), Western Australia (+28.6 per cent), Queensland (+22.7 per cent), Victoria (+9.7 per cent), and Tasmania (-11.3 per cent).

In original terms, building approvals increased in the Australian Capital Territory (+9.3 per cent) and declined in the Northern Territory (-31.7 per cent).

Price still key, but Covid-free states popular

THE value of new loan commitments for housing fell 1.4 per cent in September 2021 (seasonally adjusted), driven by a 2.7 per cent fall in new owner-occupier loan commitments, according to statistics released by the Australian Bureau of Statistics (ABS).

Real Estate Institute of Australia (REIA) president, Adrian Kelly, said new loan commitments to owner occupiers fell while investors increased their interest in Covid-zero states.

“The figures show the number of new loan commitments to first home buyers saw its eighth consecutive fall, down to 5.6 per cent in September 2021, with the number 11.4 per cent lower than the previous year,” he said.

“Covid-hit Victoria saw a massive drop of 12.7 per cent in the value of owner-occupier lending due to their sixth extended lockdown but saw a slight rise of 1.4 per cent to investors.”

Mr Kelly said housing affordability had been on the decline for the past 20 years and will continue to be an issue if inflation rises and household income fails to increase.

REIA’s Housing Affordability Report: the past 20 years shows that access to the market for first home buyers has declined over the past two decades.

Mr Kelly said the average home loan had skyrocketed over the past two decades, inflating from $150,271 to $500,219, and this continued to rise.

Mr Kelly said the ABS found the average loan size for owner-occupier dwellings (construction, purchase of new dwellings and existing dwellings) rose slightly at the national level and across most states.

“New South Wales recorded the largest rise, reaching a record high of $750,000,” he said.

According to ABS, the value of new loan commitments for owner-occupier housing fell for the fourth month in a row, to $20.7b in September, however this was 21 per cent higher compared to a year ago and 49 per cent higher than pre-Covid levels in February 2020.

Mr Kelly said investors were back, with the figures showing increased commitment levels across Australia, with South Australia seeing the highest rise of 16.4 per cent.

November 2021 Horoscopes: week 4

ARIES (March 21st - April 20th)
A challenging aspect to Saturn may make it harder for you to see the positive side to a recent change. Don't get so immersed in the problems that you miss an important opportunity. Romance. An unselfish gesture will go a long way towards making up for a recent indiscretion. Your partner will forgive you sooner than you think!

TAURUS (April 21st - May 21st)
Try to relax a little before you make an important decision. A dream later in the week will give you the guidance you need to make the right choice. Romance. A favourable aspect to Venus will help your relationship to go well. A romantic trip later in the week may not go as smoothly as planned, however!

GEMINI (May 22nd - June 21st)
This should be an excellent time for dealing with long-standing issues. You will have a lot of patience and should manage to finally follow through with a matter which you have been doing your best to put off. Romance. A meeting at work will have repercussions which won't be obvious at first. Look before you leap!

CANCER (June 22nd - July 23rd)
Following a friend's advice may take much more will-power than you actually have available. Do your best to follow through as best you can but don't be too upset if you have to give up before the end. Romance. A phone call from a member of the opposite sex could make your partner jealous. This person's interest in you may be less innocent than you suppose.

LEO (July 24th - August 23rd)
A friend who thinks along the same lines as you do will help to push you in the right direction. There are some areas of your life where you will have to make your own decisions, however. Romance. It might be better to reject a recent romantic offer. The person concerned is genuine, but you might prefer to just stay friends.

VIRGO (August 24th - September 23rd)
Disagreements at work may spill over into your family life. Be careful not to let them get dragged in any further than is absolutely necessary. Romance. This will be an excellent time to get to know a new friend. When you understand what makes them "tick" you may find out that they are more interesting than you originally thought!

LIBRA (September 24th - October 23rd)
Don't say the wrong thing! You know what you mean, but a difficult aspect to Mercury later in the week could create misunderstandings which are hard to rectify later. Romance. Rather than trying to stop your partner's bad habits you must put up with them. This is not the best time to get them to change.

SCORPIO (October 24th - November 22nd)
Stress has been piling up recently: you need a chance to get everything sorted out. Don't be afraid to ask for help from someone whom you have helped a lot in the past. Romance. You are normally a very sociable person; however this week you may prefer to spend time by yourself relaxing.

SAGITTARIUS (November 23rd - December 21st)
An acquaintance whom you meet later in the week will want to know much more about you. Listen carefully to this person's advice, as they have a lot to tell you in return. Romance. Time spent looking back over the events of the past few weeks will help you to feel more in touch with present events.

CAPRICORN (December 22nd - January 20th)
A challenging aspect to Saturn could make you quite negative at times. Do your best to see things from a more positive angle - it will be easier for you to move towards a situation which you want than away from a situation which you don't want. Romance. Your partner may find your excess energy a little overwhelming at times.

AQUARIUS (January 21st - February 19th)
An honest email from a friend will help you to understand this person much better. You will be hearing much more from this person over the coming weeks. Romance. A relative whose views are quite different from your own will nevertheless be able to give you some useful advice. Don't ignore everything that this person says.

PISCES (February 20th - March 20th)
At times you may feel that your situation is worse than it really is. This is just a minor set-back, however, and you should not give up completely. Romance. A difficult aspect to Mars could make you a little tense at times. You will have a lot of excess energy, and must be careful to avoid conflict.

Solution No. 352

THE Christmas festive season is with us. Groups are beginning to organise their get-togethers and, as we know, Father Christmas arrived in South Australia on Saturday at the Adelaide Oval and is taking up residence here until Christmas Eve. We are so pleased that Santa will be able to share some time at our Waikerie Santa's Cave this year. Santa's helpers have been planning for months, not knowing what the outcome would be until now and we give thanks that it is working out for them. If you have any spare time and would like to volunteer at Santa's Cave your support would be appreciated by the committee.

It will be full-on next Monday when the trees begin arriving at Federation Park behind the Rain Moth Gallery in Waikerie. We appreciate the support by council staff and volunteers, who all bring this special display together for our community. We look forward to when the lights adorning the big pine tree are turned on, heralding the message that Christmas is here.

The display will be enhanced by an addition to the Waikerie District Historical Society building when Waikerie's original Garford fire truck goes back to its original home after many years. This follows an upgrade to the building that will allow the Garford to be on display. The old fire station had glass bifold doors installed almost a year ago. Recently the concrete floor has been replaced and new LED lighting installed, while the inside has been freshly painted from top to bottom, and security has been installed. The Garford is having a few minor repairs, and if all goes to plan we are hoping it will be on display in a couple of weeks. Over the years our Garford has been the leading vehicle at our Christmas pageants. Without a pageant again this year, Waikerie we will have the pleasure of seeing this historic vehicle in all its glory in a new environment. Thanks to our local CFS volunteers.

Members of the Riverland West Chamber of Commerce presented a successful careers information event at the Waikerie High School recently. I am sure it was a beneficial introduction for those students who attended, and met business owners and managers of various companies within the region.

Next Tuesday, November 23, the Riverland West Chamber of Commerce will meet at the Waikerie Hotel Motel at 6pm for its AGM. Congratulations to those businesses who are finalists in the Best Business Awards for 2021: Irrigear Waikerie, Agritech Irrigation, Nays Place, Soul Essence-Life Coaching, Caudo Vineyards, Rollbusch Quality Meats, Rotary Club of Waikerie, Waikerie Bowling Club, Cordola Camping and Recreation. The winner will be announced at the meeting.

Congratulations and best wishes to Tia and Andrew Nitschke and family upon the announcement of their new business venture in Loxton. This family group already has its successful Woody's Variety Store on the Sturt Highway and the excellent No1 Gifts in McCoy Street. Loxton residents will now have something special to look forward to with this new business in their town.

As Christmas approaches our regional communities have access to their local businesses and we encourage the 'shop local' message, as local businesses are the ones who support sporting groups, and community projects within your towns. Service with a smile is a well-known message that has been proven over the years and we give thanks for the warm and friendly staff members in our communities.

The Waikerie Cancer Care Group advise that next week's 'cuppa and chat' get together on Friday, November 26 will be held at The Carpenter's Daughter coffee shop in Francis Street at 10am. This will be the last meeting of the group for 2021, so we would like to see you there.

The Loxton Club will be the venue for the Adelaide Crows Riverland Supporters Group AGM this Sunday, November 21 at 11.30 am. The 2021 AFL season was a difficult one for all clubs, especially the players, with continual changes due to Covid-19. We trust there will be less confusion next year, but whatever is decided by AFL we will work out the best we can for our Riverland Supporters Group, as we endeavour to do every year. It's been an interesting and long journey since we began our supporters group in 1999, and we give thanks to our Crows supporters in the Riverland. We also warmly welcome back former members to our group.

Thought for the week:

P.S. Thanks for the kind words I have received from many readers.

The Barmera reflection seat unveiled by the Riverland Community Suicide Prevention Network in 2019. A new bench will be unveiled at the Waikerie silos on Saturday.

New place to sit and reflect

THE Riverland Community Suicide Prevention Network is set to unveil the region's fifth reflection seat this weekend at the Waikerie silos.

The seat, donated by the Rotary Club of Waikerie, will provide locals a place to remember family and friends, and help people who have been bereaved through suicide to reflect.

The official unveiling ceremony will be held this Saturday, November 20 at 10am, coinciding with World Survivors of Suicide Loss Day.

Following the ceremony, the network will host a 'Convoy for Suicide', visiting the region's four existing reflection seats.

The convoy will visit the Barmera seat near the Bluebird Café, at 12 noon, the Renmark seat in the Jarrett Memorial Gardens at 2pm, the Berri seat at Martin Bend at 4pm, and finish at the Loxton seat on the riverfront near Snake Island at 6pm.

Activities and food will be available at various stops on the convoy, and bus transport will also be available.

Those interested in taking part in the convoy are asked to RSVP for catering and transport by emailing rcspnetwork@gmail.com.

BONUS QUESTION:

Which musician wrote the music for the 1971 Cat Stevens version of 'Morning Has Broken'? Answer in next week's Quiz.

THE FAIR-WEATHER GARDENER

WELL, one could hardly say that we have had “fair weather”.

As an ex-grower my heart goes out to all who have lost crops and infrastructure as well as the many businesses that lost stock and custom.

We can all do our bit by buying locally and just being there.

Now, onto happier things. I hope you had a chance to attend the many open gardens and functions during the Riverland Rose and Garden Festival.

Once again nature did its own thing and put on a magnificent display.

Gardens in the towns were magnificent, so congratulations to all who care for them.

If you missed it, there are still beautiful displays in the town gardens. Looking around you may notice the busy town gardeners dead-heading the roses, always a good sign to get into your own garden.

Dead head and fertilise for another flush of blooms over summer.

This will remind you to mulch your garden, ready for the extreme heat that we are sure to experience.

HARDY PERENNIALS

Last time I wrote about four hardy perennials suitable for our conditions.

Here are a few more to enhance your garden. If you can't find them in your garden centres, remember they are usually happy to order them in for you.

There are also many online nurseries for the harder-to-find plants, if you are in the position to order online.

Penstemons

These are short-lived perennials. They grow easily in any fertile, reasonably moist, free-draining soil. They grow in full sun or light shade and are best planted in mid to late spring.

They can be grown from seed but can take up to 21 days to germinate. Plants are readily available in most nurseries.

Snails and slugs don't show any interest in them, and they are tolerant of both rain and drought.

They come in many shades, from pure white, to candy pink, red and many in between. Some start at 15cm while others may reach 90cm. They can flower for up to six months, proving their value in your garden.

Day lilies

As their name suggests, the flowers only last one day, but the flowering is so continuous and prolific that this goes unnoticed.

There are two types of these plants.

The older variety dies down in winter and flowers mainly in yellow hues.

The evergreen variety has the same strappy leaves, but comes in an amazing array of colours.

Many were available for sale at the recent festival market in Renmark's Jarrett Memorial Gardens.

It has the same flowering cycle as the older variety, is fairly drought tolerant and thrives in our heat. However, it will do well in part shade too.

Coreopsis

This amazing plant will add glow to your garden.

Their bright, cheerful, yellow flowers are a joy to behold.

They are known to grow wild in areas of Western Australia and NSW.

Some are perennial and others are annual, living for only one year but seeding readily.

They are drought tolerant, long blooming and happy to grow in poor, sandy or rocky soil.

They are often referred to as 'tick-seed', due to the unusual shape of their seed capsules.

Pair with some contrasting blue and purple flowering plants such as lavender and the many purple and blue salvias. I highly recommend this plant to bring brightness to your garden.

Salvias

There is not much I can say about these plants that has not already been said in past articles.

They do so well in our climate, and are tough, hardy and prolific bloomers.

They tend to be the go-to plant for most rose growers as the two complement each other.

They range from ground covers to three to four metre high shrubby plants. These plants are readily propagated by cuttings.

So, if you purchase one that you really love or spot one in a friend's garden you can achieve many more plants in a short time.

You will need:

Potting mix

Salvia tip prunings – about 15cms

Pots

Possibly some perlite (I recommend the perlite as it prevents root rot and improves drainage. However, it is not essential).

Method:

Remove the bottom two nodes of leaves.

Fill the pot with potting mix.

Using your finger or a stick make a hole and fill with perlite.

Place the cutting into the hole up to the lower set of leaves.

Water and keep moist, but not too wet.

SUMMER FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

It is certainly time to get some summer fruits and vegetables into your plot.

I have had to do some downsizing this year, however I have still found room in large pots for tomatoes, zucchini, cutting lettuce, chilli, chives, spring onions, radish and even the odd cucumber (a small variety called 'bebe Lebanese').

We are so lucky that there are many varieties of plants suitable for smaller gardens and plots.

The first plants that went in were my herbs, basil, coriander, parsley, oregano and thyme.

All are essential to enhance our cooking. They are thriving, possibly due to the extra rain in the past few weeks.

If you are pushed for space you can go up. I'm trialling pumpkins this way. I saw them growing successfully this way in China many years ago.

I will probably be challenged by making a strong enough support.

GLOVES, HATS ETC.

Wear gloves, hat and sunscreen when gardening, and wash your hands afterwards

Now that we all own masks, don't forget to wear one when mixing sprays etc.

In the meantime, stay safe and well.

Berri Dental is now offering the Murray Mallee region a tele-dentistry appointment option.

Tele-dental: Access a dentist from the comfort of your own home

FRANTICALLY driving to the nearest hospital, GP or dental clinic for an after-hours dental emergency can now be considered a thing of the past.

Pain does not have a schedule and accessing a dentist quickly and easily across regional SA is considerably harder than in metro-Adelaide, particularly after hours, on public holidays and on weekends.

During these challenging times we face, Australian Dental Foundation (ADF), along with its local delivery partnership with Berri Dental, is proud to offer the Murray Mallee region a tele-dentistry appointment option made possible by Country SA PHN.

Country SA PHN funding has supported ADF to establish a local tele-dentistry service for the Murray Mallee region joining the greater Eyre Peninsula and Outback regions across South Australia.

“The rapid rise of tele-health, tele-dentistry and extended after hours services has been one of the innovations, due to COVID-19 restrictions and lockdowns, that has proved to be a real benefit for rural and remote South Australians,” said Country SA PHN chief executive officer, Kim Hosking.

Tele-dental is just like a normal, real-time dental consultation, only you will connect and speak to one of ADF's partnering dentists via phone or more-so video format to support effective triaging of a dental problem.

Importantly, it is not intended to replace a full dental examination, but rather a convenient solution for when you can't access a dentist in person.

Though tele-dental services are not yet funded by Medicare, through the generous support of Country SA PHN costs to patients accessing a tele-dental video consult service are greatly reduced.

For more information on tele-dental as an option for you and your family, please go to:

www.dentalfoundation.org.au.

Otherwise, to request a tele-dental consultation for a dental concern and/or issue, call the tele-dental and emergency hotline number on 0437 733 350.

Topsy-turvy Wednesday bowls season continues

IN what is fast becoming a most remarkable season of Bowls Riverland Wednesday pennants, the top three sides swapped places with the three teams below them last week.

Renmark, Monash and Berri occupied positions four through six on the ladder after six rounds, but fast forward a week later and they are now first, second and third.

The closeness of the first half of the season has set up a fascinating run into the Christmas break.

Renmark easily accounted for Lyrup by 32 shots last week, with Jocie Cooper's team recording a huge win in the process.

The Lawns blew a spot to move a win clear on the ladder, dropping a tough encounter with Waikerie by one shot.

Berri bounced back into form with a 52-shot win over Barmera led by Kay Tanner's team, while Monash jumped into second spot with a 25-shot win over bottom team Lyrup.

No safe hits? No problems

IT was a night of tough losses for the Berri Baseball Club, but terrific wins for their opponents in Riverland A grade baseball at Glassey Park on Friday.

Renmark defeated Berri Red by one run, despite not registering a safe hit for the night.

Some great base running saw Renmark take a 5-2 lead after one innings, before the Warriors brought the deficit back to one run after two.

One run each in the third and final innings in tough and windy conditions closed out the game with the Angels home by a solitary run.

Jesse Stemberger picked up the only safe hit for Berri Red.

The second game saw Riverland Pirates beat Berri Blue 5-3.

Pirates got the jump early, taking a three-run lead as the young team batted well in windy conditions.

The lead was extended to 5-0 after three innings before Berri Blue started to get its batting game going.

A double play in the third innings gave Berri hope of containing the Pirates, along with an in-field home run to the lightning quick Damian Heinicke, but the Pirates had done enough early in the game with safe hits to Jon Pintilie, Deanna Campbell and Jamie Frazer.

Softball big hitters dominate

BIG wins were the order of the day as the Riverland senior softball season continued at Glassey Park on Saturday.

Loxton easily accounted for an undermanned Berri 12-0. The Redsox had their chances, but were unable to convert their hits into runs.

Deanna Collard-Campbell was the standout player for Berri Red, picking up a three-bagger.

However, outside of her efforts it was all Loxton as Evan McAllister hit a home run late in the fifth innings and Noah Paul picked up a three-bagger in the dominant win for the Strikers.

The late game saw top-of-the-table Cobdogla overcome Berri 12-4.

The Eagles won despite several players being out of action as the club's C grade team helped fill the gaps.

Consistent batting and fielding helped Cobdogla to victory, with Bron Smith leading the way.

Highlights of the C grade competition included a young Cobdogla team securing another draw, this time against Loxton Blue, Berri holding on for a thrilling high-scoring win over Loxton Green and Janiquha Cook nailing two home runs to lead Cobdogla Blue to a 14-11 win over Renmark.

REMARK North picked up a massive nine-wicket win over Loxton in Riverland A grade cricket on Saturday.

With the match looking likely to be abandoned after the covers were blown off the pitch on Friday, before sprinklers came on that evening, the match was agreed to be moved onto a hard wicket.

Loxton took full advantage, racking up a decent score of 6/157. Veteran Mick Gutsche compiled 72 not out as the North bowlers were unable to dislodge the star.

Jake Albrecht also contributed with 25, while the tidy bowling of Zakk Gallo (2/21) and Tarque Williamson (1/19) restricted Loxton at times.

In reply, North opener Ben Files took off for a quick single and pulled a muscle in his groin.

Rather than retire, Files decided to swing the bat and finished on 87 as North passed Loxton's total with five balls remaining.

At the other end, Liam Jackson compiled a patient and unbeaten 49 off 115 deliveries.

The match between Berri and Waikerie-

Ramco was abandoned.

Loxton's basketball dominance continues

LOXTON continued its dominant and unbeaten start to the Riverland division one men's basketball season last week.

The Supercats won the top-of-the-table clash with Waikerie by a whopping 39 points in a huge statement to the rest of the competition.

Brandan Tregeagle, Jack Oates and Jesse Will combined for 59 points between them, with Oates dangerous from in close and the others on song from long range.

Jack Parfitt led all scorers for Waikerie with 20 points, while Kyle Ling scored 10 for the Warriors.

Waikerie will need to regroup ahead of tomorrow night's clash with the in-form Renmark, after the Steamers rolled Berri by 49 points last week.

A huge 35-point opening term saw the game over quickly as Renmark asserted its dominance.

Declan Johnson was on fire for the Steamers, amassing 35 points to become the competition's leading scorer.

Judd Hansen was also in on the fun, scoring 22 points for Renmark.

For the Blazers, Joel Szalbot scored 22 points while Heath and Harry Campbell scored 27 between them.

Meanwhile mother-and-daughter combination Hannah and Sienna Lehmann nearly outscored Loxton on their own in Waikerie's big division one women's win.

Hannah scored 22 and Sienna 14 as Waikerie won the clash 59-38 after a close first half.

Summer Smith (nine points), Mackella Hogan (seven) and Anita Modlinski (seven) led the way for Loxton.

Berri easily accounted for bottom side Renmark by 25 points in Thursday's final division one game.

Lana Gregoric and Claire Schupelius scored 14 points in the big win, which would have been even larger if not for a final-quarter fightback from Renmark.

Paige Roberts finished with 16 points for the Steamers.

Comeback elevates Loxton up ladder

A COME-from-behind win for Loxton elevated it into second spot on the Riverland division one tennis ladder on Saturday.

Loxton trailed by one rubber heading into the final three doubles clashes, but claimed two to defeat Berri despite trailing on games.

Phil and Tasmin Smith defeated Phil Cresp and Georgia Tzanavaras 7-5, while Justin Lane and Ainslie Biggins overcame Shane McPherson and Kirsty Barnett 6-3 to seal the win for Loxton.

In the singles, Loxton won all four of the men's rubbers, while Maria and Georgia Tzanavaras were triumphant for Berri in the women's matches.

Cobdogla made it four from four with a comfortable win over Renmark.

Renmark got off to a good start with confident doubles victories to David Strongman and Warren Hill and John Pick and Dean Schumann.

However, Sophie Nettle and Hayley Drogemuller got on top to turn the contest in Cobdogla's favour.

Cobdogla led 4-2 before the singles and increased their lead to an unbeatable 9-3 ahead of the final doubles games.

Talent session for junior tennis players

LOCAL junior tennis players are invited to a talent development session at the Berri Tennis Club this Sunday, from 9am to 1pm.

Hosted by Tennis Australia and local accredited coaches, the session aims to provide opportunities for talented players to come together and train in a competitive environment.

"(The session will) ensure that each eligible player and family has opportunities and access to pathways outside of their individual program, where they can receive education and support that includes training, hitting, match-play, S&C, tournament support, NDS communication and links," a spokesperson said.

"(It will also) broaden the pathway available to players that are tracking towards NDS and college pathways."

Guest coach this Sunday will be Tennis Australia's SA/NT talent operations manager Colin Ebelthite.

SAPSASA tennis kids at state titles

THE Riverland SAPSASA tennis team has returned from a successful state championship in Adelaide.

Competing in division three, the team won four of its seven matches to finish in fourth place out of eight teams.

After winning its first four matches, the Riverland team looked on track to take out the title, but tired on the third and fourth days.

Coach John Pick said the team performed admirably against tough opposition.

"All teams thoroughly enjoyed a Fast 4 mixed doubles competition in the afternoon, with the Riverland team excelling..." Mr Pick said.

"The spirit amongst the team has been great throughout the week and the players will all have positive memories that will last a long time."

Mr Pick thanked Liz Elliott and Peter Safralidis for their support.

Veteran visitor takes Barmera Spring Classic

REGULAR veteran visitor Dr Geoff White eclipsed the big names to win the open men's division of the Laser Electrical Barmera Golf Spring Classic on Saturday.

White carded a net 71 off his 22 handicap in windy conditions to beat Grange star Corey Baker by one shot for the lowest net score on a tough day for scoring. Baker and Barmera pennant star Peter Johns both carded 76 off the stick but could not overhaul the friendly doctor from the Eagles Golf Club.

White went out in 47 and home in 46, including a triple bogey 7 on the par 4 16th.

He praised the hospitality of the Barmera Golf Club and the condition of the course after being named the victor.

"We all love coming back to Barmera," he said. "We have played here three times this year. You can't fault the friendly atmosphere and the welcoming members. The course was in great condition as usual despite the wind and rain."

Swan Reach's Trevor Hancock and local Phil Selfe were equal third on net 73, one shot ahead of a group of seven on 74.

Loxton golf legend Marlene 'Bonnie' Tyler headed a small women's field with a net 69 on her 12 handicap. However, she was made to work for the win with both Sheila Wickstein, on the comeback trail after knee surgery, and Willunga single-figure handicapper Jessica Reynolds scoring net 71.

Reynolds had 78 off the stick after nines of 38 and 40, including birdies on the first and 12th holes.

A packed field struggled with the challenging conditions which were far from synonymous with this time of year. Only four players – White, Tyler, Wickstein and Reynolds – managed to break their handicaps for the day.

In the graded sections Brad Campbell won the men's A grade from Johns, while Hancock took the honours ahead of Selfe on a countback in the B grade.

Joffa Rosbergen won the C grade trophy from West Lakes visitor David Torley.

Sunday's stableford shotgun start was also a struggle in rainy and windy conditions. Young up-and-coming local Brandon Uren had 40 points to street the field and win from Hancock (38) and Berri club president Wayne Thiele (37).

Tanunda's big-hitting David Ryles was the star of the Classic's annual Skins shoot-out on Saturday evening, winning three holes. The shoot-out was moved from Sunday to Saturday this season and resulted in a lot more golfers hanging around to watch and enjoy a hearty meal at the club.

President Neville McPherson thanked his army of volunteers and greenkeeper David Hastwell for their hours of selfless work to make the event such a success.

"Putting on these events is very demanding, so we are blessed to have such a dedicated band of volunteers helping with the many aspects involved in making the event so popular," he said.

"We had a capacity field for the two days which just shows how well the course is regarded within South Australian golfing circles."

McPherson paid tribute to the overall winner Geoff White. "He is one of those people who comes to enjoy the experience and it is great to see him have a win," he said. "We seem to be getting more and more outsiders visiting regularly and that is down to the course condition and the atmosphere created around the club by a lot of the members."

Winning dinghy double for brothers

SCOTT and Zac Pogorecki claimed a winning double in the Riverland Dinghy Club's Dash 4 Cash and the Hoops Auto 4WD Renmark Enduro recently.

With a predominantly South Australian competitor base for the first couple of races of 2021, three teams travelled from Queensland to race, including one for the first time.

The Pogoreckis continued to demonstrate their high level of racing skill in their Mad Hueys boat, lodging times of 56.99 and 55.60 seconds to finish six seconds clear of nearest rivals Shaun Jenke and Ben Kaye in the Dash 4 Cash 30hp sports class held on the Friday night.

They backed it up on the weekend, this time outlasting Reece Yard and Shane Taylor by just one second to win the Enduro.

A club spokesperson said the Dash 4 Cash, which is usually held in February in conjunction with the Dinghy Derby, was well attended and supported despite the event being ticketed for the first time to adhere with the club's Covid-19 event management plan.

"Prices were kept extremely low and the club would like to thank all who attended," the spokesperson said.

The Dash 4 Cash round was supported, with event sponsorship funding from the Renmark Paringa Council.

"It was very rewarding after 18 months of planning to be able to host families to the event in ideal weather conditions," the spokesperson said.

The recent storm affected the Enduro, with sweeps of the creeks and waterways conducted to ensure safety before the race.

The final round of the series is the Paul Hutchins Loan Centre Hunchee Run on December 11.

Over 50 interstate teams and competitors will be champing at the bit to get back across the border to compete going forward.

History as Dog Tag award shared

FOR only the second time in Riverland Superdogs 39-year history, the best player of the season award has been shared.

Joe Butson and Darren Kennedy were joint winners of the 2021 Dog Tag award, after the count was held during the club's end-of-year trip for the first time.

Butson took the votes in the final match of the 11-round season to force a tie with Kennedy. Runner-up was Jason King, just ahead of Kim Polst.

Best First Year player was awarded to Paul Glassey for his contributions on and off the field, just pipping Ian Forsyth and Greg Schloithe.

Greg MacDonnell took home the award for the Most Games Played, featuring in all 11 matches.

Club stalwart Sam Ingerson was awarded life membership for his 13-year involvement with the club as a player, trainer, social committee member and training/game day/social events caterer.

Under 15 girls footy coming in 2022

She played in the RFL's senior competition in 2021 against mature women as a 15-year-old.

"If there was an under 15 competition when I played it would've prepared me a lot better and given me more confidence before going to Adelaide and playing with girls my own age," she said.

"Playing with the boys helped me get used to the physicality and the bigger bodies, but the skills of the girls down in Adelaide are better and it's a lot faster too."

The new competition will target girls between the age of 12 and 15, while the Auskick centre will be for girls aged between five and 12.

Both options will have a focus on participation and fun, and are seen as entry level programs.

SANFL game development co-ordinator Nick Dillon said the introduction of a complete footy pathway was vital for local female footballers.

"If the Riverland is going to have a female presence, then it needs to be done right," he said.

"The feedback we're constantly getting is that girls want to play with girls, not the boys."

"Hopefully now we can attract more girls to Auskick and junior footy and get them started at a younger age in a more comfortable space."

"Playing from February to April also gives those girls who want to play both footy and netball the opportunity to do so."

Mr Dillon said for the under 15 girls competition to be successful, parents need to contact their local club and get involved.

"Clubs are already light on for volunteers so new helpers are required to make this viable," he said.

"We're cognisant that adding another team for them to field and the volunteer-hours that come with that is a lot for footy clubs to take on, particularly coming out of Covid-19.

"But the benefits certainly outweigh the negatives."

"So if you have a daughter who is keen to play, please get involved in some way to help shoulder the load on your club."

Molly encouraged local girls to pull on a guernsey and get involved with their local club.

"Footy is an awesome sport and it's definitely not just for boys," she said.

"It's a really supportive environment and the girls get around each other. Footy is a lot more friendly (than other sports)."

"It's awesome how it's growing here in the Riverland."

The first round of under 15 matches and Auskick will be held on Monday, February 28.

Check the RFL's Facebook page for more competition details and fixtures.

Powerlifting returns to Cobdogla Club

A dozen lifters - seven female and five male - took part in the competition, with age ranges from the 20s to the 80s.

"These participants came from Adelaide, Mt Gambier and the Riverland to compete in the competition," a spokesperson said.

"Achievements were impressive, especially from those trying the sport for the first time."

Six new state records were set. Adelaide's Trinity Ellacott set four new records, while Dean Jenkinson, also of Adelaide, and the Riverland's Rose Gow each set one new record.

Under 15 girls footy in 2022

LOCAL girls who have dreamed of becoming the Riverland's first AFLW player have received a boost this week, with the introduction of a 9-a-side under 15 girls competition and all-girls Auskick centre in the region in 2022.

Since the formation of the RFL's senior women's competition in 2018, young females have been required to play in the boys junior competitions, with no suitable alternative in the Riverland.

However, SANFL and the RFL have been working behind the scenes to create a complete female footy pathway to allow more girls to develop their footy at a younger age.

Played on Monday nights starting in February, both the under 15 competition and all-girls Auskick will be held at the same venue each week on a rotating basis across the six RFL clubs.

Berri footballer Missy Blanck will co-ordinate the all-girls Auskick each week.

Berri Football Club's Molly Wishart, who has recently joined West Adelaide's junior program, said the new under 15 competition would be "awesome" for the next generation of female footballers in the region.

Wright stays as RFL chair

MARK Wright was re-elected chair of the Riverland Football League at the RFL's annual general meeting in Berri on Monday night.

Wright has been in the news in recent times regarding his stance on the RFL's Independent competition, and his belief the Independents need to stand alone, no longer under the RFL banner.

He has also warned that club amalgamations and mergers are inevitable, and last week described Independent club Cobdogla's decision to go into recess for season 2022 as "a sign of the times".

Mr Wright will be supported by new vice-president Kym Petherick, who hails from Loxton North. Others on the RFL Commission include Brenton Fenwick, Craig Thiel, former RFL chair Murray Kemp, and Andrew Linke.
