BILL BYRNE President & Founder

Women's competitive athletics are on a rise in the United States. The growth patterns the belief of Bill Byrne.

Year after year attendance figures for both collegiate and high school basketball has been on a metric rise. Women basketball players have received national media recognition.

For the past two years Byrne has been revitalizing the idea of a women's professional basketball league. Byrne realized the importance of timing for the rebirth of the project.

The emergence of cable television, national newspapers and the recent success of the United States in the Olympics have convinced Byrne that now is the time to launch his project.

Women's basketball is just one of the areas that Byrne has been involved.

He has been active in the scouting, signing and counseling of professional football players. Several clients have performed in the National Football League and the United States Football League.

Already Byrne and his staff have made their mark with the WABA. A national television contract was signed with the Satellite Program Network (SPN) to do a game of the week telecast.

License agreements were signed with several national sponsors including Spalding, AVIA, American Express and Safian.

Already the league office has been deluged by prospective franchise applicants for the 1985 season.

Byrne enjoys the competitive part of athletics himself. Currently he is active in the Sport of Kings by owning and racing horses at various race tracks around the Midwest.

Byrne formulated women's professional basketball when he founded the WBL in 1978. He also founded a men's Slo-Pitch professional softball league in the late 1970's.

About the Women's American Basketball Association

During the past two years, Bill Byrne has quietly laid the groundwork for the re-emergence of Women's Professional Basketball. The draft of college seniors and free agents was held during the spring of 1984 in Columbus, Ohio. A decision was made during league planning sessions to launch the league in the fall in order to accommodate television requirements and build upon the interest generated through US Women's Olympic Basketball Team which captured the gold medal at the 1984 summer olympics.

League officials scrutinized hundreds of applications for franchises and accepted six that met the credentials set by the founders in regards to location, availability of arena and ability to operate for a minimum of three years. Six teams; Houston, Dallas, Atlanta, Virginia, Chicago and Columbus comprise the league for the 1984 season.

The maiden season will consist of a short 22 game schedule with eleven home and eleven away games per team.

In order to meet the growing demand for television coverage, 13 games will be telecast nationally over the Satellite Program Network (SPN). The games will be televised from different sites at 7 p.m. Eastern time for thirteen consecutive Sunday nights through the fall season with the All Star Game to be aired on Christmas Day. SPN currently serves 11 million US homes.

The WABA Licensing and Properties Division has contracted with several companies for the 1984 season. Spalding has been chosen as the official ball for the league. The smaller ball was conceived in 1977 by Bill Byrne, but it wasn't until 1984 that the ball was adopted by the NCAA for all collegiate play.

The WABA ball provided exclusively by Spalding is 1" smaller in circumference and 2½ ounces lighter. Spalding will market the WABA endorsed ball in genuine leather, synthetic leather and rubber.

The WABA has selected AVIA high performance athletic footwear as the official shoe for league play. AVIA has constructed a basketball shoe specifically designed for a woman's foot. Approximately 90% of all WABA players will wear the AVIA shoe.

The properties division has also signed with New York based Safian Enterprises to handle novelty and concession sales. Additionally, the American Express Company has agreed to provide marketing support nationally, as well as in all WABA markets.

Neuville Industries has been signed as the official sock of the league. Neuville will work to develop national distribution and sales of the WABA sock in stores throughout the U.S.

The WABA plans to add a western division in 1985 with a minimum of four cities on the West Coast.

The increased spectator interest in women's basketball combined with the athletic ability of the players ensures a successful inaugural season and future prosperity for the new WABA.

GEORGE VEST Vice President

George Vest has parlayed a career in law enforcement into his current post as the WABA Vice President-Director of Security.

Vest joined the Columbus Police Department in 1955. In 1968 he left the force to join the Smith & Wesson Fire-arm Company.

Vest has been active in many fraternal and professional organizations. He was a member of Columbus Police Combat Pistol Team that won the 1965 national championship.

SARAH BLACKWELDER-WILLIAMS

Director of Marketing, Licensing and Public Relations

Born in Rio Vista, California, Sarah Blackwelder-Williams has been busy coordinating television and licensing packages for the WABA. A graduate of the University of California at Berkeley, she worked with Golden Gaters Productions in Corte Madera, California where she handled the development of several sporting events across the United States. From there she joined Elkay Sports where she was the Advertising Director of Pro Tennis Magazine. Sarah recently left her position as vice-president of Executive Sports Marketing in Columbus, Ohio to join the Women's American Basketball Association.

DICK TANNER

Director of Operations

Holding the key position of liason between the players, the colleges and the WABA is Dick Tanner, the league's Director of Operations and Player Personnel.

Tanner, who joined the WABA Office on March 1, 1984, has a very extensive basketball background that peaked when he earned All-City and All-State honors playing for Columbus East High School.

At the conclusion of his prep career Tanner matriculated at Central State (O) College. Before joining the WABA Office Tanner enjoyed successful careers working as a youth counselor for 10 years and 5 years as the chief criminal investigator for the State Public Defender.

Tanner and his staff provided most of the information that the team owners and officials used while conducting their initial player draft.

Nancy Lieberman Presents SPORTS IMPRESSIONS . . . a new store for the serious sports fan!

"I have opened a new kind of store for the serious sports fan called SPORTS IMPRESSIONS. SPORTS IMPRESSIONS carries just about everything in Pro and College team wear . . . including the authentic playing apparel worn by the pros in the NFL, NHL, NBA, USFL and the American and National Baseball Leagues.

"I'm sorry that I don't have a store in your area. (At least not yet.) But, meanwhile, if you're looking for anything in authentic or official licensed Pro or College team wear, give Bernard Smith a call at SPORTS IMPRESSIONS (215) 238-1313. He'll be glad to arrange a mail order for you."
