

Alma Angotti, Esq.
Counsel, National Association of Securities Dealers

ALMA ANGOTTI received a J.D. from the University of Virginia in 1982. From 1982 until 1986, she was an associate at the Washington law firm of Howrey & Simon practicing in the areas of antitrust and criminal litigation, including a criminal trial and two 11th Circuit appeals in U.S. v. Heller. In 1996, she joined the Securities and Exchange Commission's Division of Enforcement where she prosecuted several insider trading and financial fraud securities cases. In 1990, Ms. Angotti joined the Division of Enforcement's Office of Chief Counsel with responsibility for reviewing enforcement actions for submission to the Commission. Ms. Angotti also worked on a variety of policy matters and wrote speeches and articles for the Director of the Division of Enforcement.

In 1998, Angotti became the enforcement counsel for the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN), the Treasury Department bureau responsible for money laundering and terrorist financing issues. She was later promoted to Senior Enforcement Counsel. She was hired to redesign and implement FinCEN's largely dormant program for enforcing the anti-money laundering requirements of the Bank Secrecy Act against financial institutions. She participated in enforcement actions against Riggs National Bank, Western Union, Korea Exchange Bank, Banco Popular de Puerto Rico, Sovereign Bank and Hartsfield Capital Securities, Inc., among others.

She was also responsible for drafting various proposed and final regulations required by the Bank Secrecy Act and the Patriot Act, including anti-money laundering rules for hedge funds, investment advisers, commodities trading advisers and commodities futures merchants, and regulations requiring suspicious activity reporting by broker-dealers and mutual funds.

In 2004, Ms. Angotti joined the NASD Department of Enforcement working primarily with NASD's regional and district offices. She also serves as an NASD regulatory expert in the anti-money laundering area.

Health Care Correspondent, "News Hour with Jim Lehrer"
Public Broadcasting System

SUSAN DENTZER is an on-air correspondent with the "NewsHour with Jim Lehrer", where she leads a unit dedicated to providing in-depth coverage of health care, health policy and Social Security issues.

The health unit was awarded the 2000 Robinson Electronic Media Award by the American Psychiatric Association for its report on schizophrenia, and a 2003 Gabriel Award from the Catholic Academy for Communication Arts Professionals for coverage of the "Eden Alternative" approach to nursing home reform. The unit, begun in 1998, is funded by a grant from the Henry J. Kaiser Family Foundation.

Prior to joining The NewsHour in July 1998, Dentzer was chief economics correspondent and economics columnist for U.S. News & World Report, where she served from 1987 to 1997. In a series of columns and stories for U.S. News, she reported extensively on the debate over reforming and partially "privatizing" Social Security and over such health policy issues as regulation of managed care. Before joining U.S. News, Dentzer was at Newsweek, where she was senior writer covering business news until 1987.

Dentzer's work in television has included appearances as a regular analyst or commentator on ABC's Nightline, CNN's News Night with Aaron Brown, The McLaughlin Group and C-SPAN. Dentzer's writing has also earned her several fellowships. As a Nieman Fellow at Harvard University for the 1986-87 academic year, she studied health economics and other disciplines. As a U.S.-Japan Leadership Program Fellow in 1991, Dentzer conducted research on U.S.-Japan economic relations and the effects of the aging Japanese population.

A graduate of Dartmouth, Dentzer holds an honorary Master of Arts degree from Dartmouth and an honorary doctorate of humane letters from Muskingum College, New Concord, Ohio. She served on the Dartmouth Board of Trustees from 1993 to 2004 and was the first woman ever to serve as Chair of Dartmouth's board from 2001 to 2004. She is a trustee of the Dartmouth-Hitchcock Medical Center and a member of the Board of Overseers of Dartmouth Medical School.

She currently serves on the Board of Directors of the Global Health Council, the world's largest membership organization of groups involved in global health, and is also a member of the Board of Directors of the Japan Society of New York. Dentzer chairs the advisory board of the California Health Benefits Review Committee and is a member of the National Advisory Committee for the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation's Investigator Awards in Health Policy Research.

Secretary of Agriculture Mike Johanns

www.usda.gov

Mike Johanns was sworn in as the 28th Secretary of the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) on January 21, 2005.

Secretary Johanns' strong agricultural roots stretch back to his childhood. He was born in Iowa and grew up doing chores on his family's dairy farm. As the son of a dairy farmer, he developed a deep respect for the land and the people who work it. He still describes himself as "a farmer's son with an intense passion for agriculture."

That passion showed during Johanns' tenure as Nebraska's 38th governor. During his six years in office, Johanns was a strong advocate for rural communities and farmers and ranchers. He enacted a Value-Added Agriculture Initiative, signed into law the "Agricultural Opportunities and Value-Added Partnership Act," supported the development of a hydroponic produce facility, and signed legislation that focused financial resources on providing transferable, non-refundable gas tax credits for the production of ethanol. He also led eight delegations of Nebraska government, business, and agriculture leaders on trade missions to foreign countries including Japan, Taiwan, China, Hong Kong, Australia, Korea, Singapore, Malaysia, Brazil and Chile.

Johanns served as chairman of the Governors' Biotechnology Partnership and as the state government representative on the advisory committee to the Export-Import Bank of the United States. As a member of both the National Governors' Association and the Western Governors' Association, Johanns concentrated on issues important to agriculture, including drought relief, ethanol, and the 2002 Farm Bill.

Secretary Johanns is a graduate of St. Mary's University of Minnesota in Winona. He earned a law degree from Creighton University in Omaha and practiced law in O'Neill and Lincoln, Nebraska. Johanns served on the Lancaster County Board from 1983-1987, and on the Lincoln City Council 1989-1991. He was elected mayor of Lincoln in 1991. He was reelected in 1995, and successfully ran for governor three years later.

Secretary Johanns is married to Stephanie Johanns, a former Lancaster County Commissioner and State Senator. The couple has two children.

Lester M. Joseph

Principal Deputy Chief of the Legal Policy Unit of the Asset Forfeiture & Anti-Money Laundering Section, Department of Justice

LESTER M. JOSEPH is the Principal Deputy Chief of the Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section of the Criminal Division, U.S. Department of Justice. He was a Deputy Chief in the Section from to 2002, and has been a Principal Deputy Chief since January 2002. The Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section is responsible for coordinating policy with respect to the application and enforcement of the asset forfeiture and money laundering statutes by federal prosecutors and the federal law enforcement agencies.

Prior to working in the Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section, Mr. Joseph worked for seven years as a trial attorney in the Department of Justice's Organized Crime and Racketeering Section. From 1981-1984, Mr. Joseph was an Assistant State's Attorney in Cook County (Chicago), Illinois.

Mr. Joseph received his B.A. from the University of Michigan in 1971 and his J.D. from The John Marshall Law School (Chicago, Illinois) in 1980. He is an Adjunct Professor at The George Washington University in Washington, D.C., where he teaches in the Criminal Justice Program in the Department of Sociology.

Rep. Carolyn B. Maloney (D-NY)

CONGRESSWOMAN CAROLYN B. MALONEY, a Democrat, represents the 14th district in New York City. Her district contains many of the city's most historic and well-known neighborhoods, including most of the East Side, Astoria and Long Island City, Queens. After serving for ten years on the New York City Council, Maloney defeated a 14-year incumbent in her first race for Congress in 1992. She was reelected in 2004 with 81% of the vote and has never lost an election. Maloney serves on the House Financial Services Committee, the Government Reform Committee, and is the ranking House Democrat on the Joint Economic Committee.

Rep. Maloney is a national leader on homeland security and was named Chair of the House Democratic Caucus Task Force on Homeland Security in June 2003. In that position, she has organized hearings, national surveys and reports on homeland security and has advanced Democratic security policy. In June 2003, Maloney convened a special task force hearing in Washington on local homeland security needs, hearing testimony from first responders and local officials from around the country. Maloney also coordinated a national survey of local responders and officials on hometown security; the results were compiled into the October 2003 report, Federal Homeland Security Assistance to America's Hometowns.

As a New Yorker, Maloney has led the charge in Congress to reform federal homeland security assistance distribution, particularly to America's most targeted areas. She has fought vehemently for a change in the funding program that sends disproportionate amounts of security money to "low-threat" states and for an increase in "high-threat" funding to targeted cities.

Rep. Maloney was named the ranking House Democrat on the Joint Economic Committee (JEC) in January 2005. The JEC is Congress's chief body to review economic conditions and recommend improvements in economic policy.

Rep. Maloney has been the Ranking Member of the Subcommittee on Domestic and International Monetary Policy, Trade and Technology of the Financial Services Committee since February 2003. This Subcommittee oversees Federal Reserve interest rate policy that directly affects all mortgage, car, and credit card interest rates. She is also a member of the Subcommittee on Financial Institutions and Consumer Credit and the Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations.

Since being elected to Congress, Maloney has worked to modernize financial services laws and regulations while strongly advocating for consumer protections. She is the author of the "Consumer Checking Account Fairness Act," which would ensure that deposits quickly clear into consumers' accounts, giving them the same technology advantage as banks have obtained from electronic check clearing.

As a member of the House Government Reform Committee, Maloney serves on the Subcommittee on National Security, Emerging Threats, and International Relations, the Subcommittee on Government Management, Finance, and Accountability and the Subcommittee on Federalism and the Census.

As the former co-chair of the Women's Caucus, Maloney is a nationally-recognized advocate for women's and family issues, with special emphasis on funding for women's health needs, reproductive freedom, and international family planning. She was a member of the U.S. delegations to the Fourth World Conference on Women in Beijing and to the International Conference on Population and Development (ICPD) fifth-year review and appraisal at The Hague (Cairo + 5). In 2004, she attended ICPD's tenth-year review meeting in Puerto Rico.

John W. Moscow, Esq.
Partner, Rosner Moscow & Napierala, LLP

JOHN MOSCOW is a Partner at Rosner Moscow & Napierala, LLP, a New York law firm.

Mr. Moscow has extensive experience and expertise in the investigation and litigation of domestic and cross-border economic crimes involving financial institutions, corporations and individuals. Prior to entering private practice, Mr. Moscow had a distinguished 30-year career with the New York County District Attorney's Office, where he served as the senior white-collar crime prosecutor responsible for cases involving international fraud, tax fraud, securities fraud and theft, and fraud against United States and foreign government agencies. A significant number of Mr. Moscow's investigations and prosecutions have involved money laundering.

The following notable cases are representative of the matters Mr. Moscow handled at the District Attorney's Office:

- Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI). Mr. Moscow conducted the investigation that resulted in the closure of BCCI and led to the prosecution and conviction of 16 individuals. He also worked with the United States Department of Justice and the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System to recover $1.65 billion for the benefit of BCCI's liquidators and defrauded creditors in the United Kingdom, Luxembourg and the Cayman Islands.
- Republic of Venezuela. At the request of the Venezuelan government, Mr. Moscow supervised the investigation and successful prosecution of several corrupt Venezuelan bankers who had engaged in a multinational "shell game" to conceal fraud and theft of substantial depositor funds.
- A.R. Baron & Co. Mr. Moscow successfully prosecuted 14 defendants, including the company, for defrauding investors around the world in what was the first application of New York's Enterprise Corruption statute to indict and convict an entire brokerage firm.
- Russian Money Laundering. In the course of a multinational securities fraud investigation, Mr. Moscow and his colleagues, working with the British National Crime Squad, uncovered a scheme in which more than $7 billion was laundered through a major New York City bank. Mr. Moscow supervised the subsequent prosecution and conviction of several individuals for crimes they committed using the bank's facilities.

- Enron. Mr. Moscow investigated and supervised the presentation of evidence concerning a major United States money center bank's conduct in connection with Enron, and coordinated a joint settlement with the bank and the District Attorney's Office, the United States Securities and Exchange Commission, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, the United States Department of Treasury's Office of the Comptroller of the Currency and the New York State Banking Department.
- Tyco International. Mr. Moscow headed the investigation of Tyco's business and financial affairs and the subsequent prosecution of Chief Executive Officer L. Dennis Koslowski, Chief Financial Officer Mark Swartz, Chief Legal Officer Mark Belnick, and Lead Director Frank Walsh.

Mr. Moscow is a recognized expert on technical legal and financial topics relating to money laundering. He speaks regularly at the annual Cambridge International Symposium on Economic Crime and has spoken at World Bank Conferences on Current Legal Issues. He lectures widely on money laundering issues in Europe and Asia, as well as at professional conferences and seminars in North and South America.

The World Bank and the London School of Economics have published Mr Moscow's papers on money laundering. He has served as the District Attorney's delegate to the United States Department of Treasury Bank Secrecy Act Advisory Group at the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN).

Mr. Moscow was elected an Honorary Fellow of Advance Legal Studies in London and was honored as an outstanding public servant by the New York County Lawyers' Association. He received his law degree from Harvard Law School and his bachelor's degree from the University of Chicago.

Colin Murchie

Director of Government Affairs, Solar Energy Industry Association

COLIN MURCHIE joined SEIA in the Summer of 2002, after graduating from Cornell University with a Bachelors of Science degree in Natural Resources Policy, Management, and Human Dimensions. Mr. Murchie additionally holds U.S. Patent # 6,060,152.

Mr. Murchie has served as a lead government representative for the solar energy industry, as SEIA's negotiator in the New York State Renewables Portfolio Standard process, as well as in the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission's development of interconnection standards for small, distributed generators. He has given testimony and presentations before the United States Department of Agriculture, the Maryland State Legislature, and other governmental bodies. Colin is the staff contact for the Photovoltaics Division of SEIA.

Annette L. Nazareth
Commissioner, Securities and Exchange Commission

ANNETTE L. NAZARETH was appointed by President George W. Bush to the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission and sworn in on August 4, 2005.

Prior to being appointed a Commissioner, Ms. Nazareth served as the Commission's Director of the Division of Market Regulation, a position she held from March of 1999 until August of 2005. As Director, Ms. Nazareth had primary responsibility for the supervision and regulation of the U.S. securities markets, principally through the regulation of brokers and dealers, exchanges, clearing agencies, transfer agents and securities information processors. Significant initiatives adopted by the Commission during her tenure include: execution quality disclosure rules, implementation of equities decimal pricing, short sale reforms, implementation of a voluntary regime for consolidated supervision of broker-dealer holding companies, and modernization of the national market system rules. She joined the Commission staff in 1998 as Senior Counsel to Chairman Arthur Levitt and served briefly as the Interim Director of the Division of Investment Management.

Ms. Nazareth served as the Commission's representative on the Financial Stability Forum (FSF) since 1999. The FSF promotes international financial stability through information exchange and international cooperation in financial supervision and surveillance. The FSF brings together on a regular basis national authorities responsible for financial stability in significant international financial centers.

Prior to joining the Commission staff, Ms. Nazareth held several positions in the financial services industry. As a Managing Director of Smith Barney from 1997 to 1998, she was deputy head of the capital markets legal group. As a Senior Vice President and Senior Counsel of Lehman Brothers, Ms. Nazareth was the chief legal advisor to the fixed income division from 1994 to 1997. From 1986 to 1994, she served as Managing Director and General Counsel of Mabon Securities Corp. and its predecessor business, Mabon, Nugent & Co. She began her career as an associate with the law firm of Davis Polk & Wardwell in 1981, where she worked with commercial banks, investment banks and corporations on mergers and acquisitions, syndicated loans and public and private securities offerings.

Ms. Nazareth was born in Providence, Rhode Island. She received her J.D. from Columbia University, School of Law, where she was a Harlan Fiske Stone Scholar and her A.B., magna cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa, from Brown University.

Rep. Deborah Pryce (R-OH) (Invited)

CONGRESSWOMAN DEBORAH PRYCE first came to the United States House of Representatives in 1993 and has since established herself as a strong leader who has earned the respect of members on both sides of the aisle. Rep. Pryce was elected by her colleagues to serve as the Chairman of the House Republican Conference, which makes her the fourth-highest ranking member and the highest ranking Republican woman ever in the House of Representatives.

In addition to her leadership role as Republican Conference Chairman, Congresswoman Pryce serves on the House Committee on Financial Services. She returned to the Committee after spending the past ten years on the House Rules Committee. The Committee has jurisdiction over the Federal Reserve, U.S. monetary policy, financial services technology issues, currency and coinage, and economic growth. Pryce is the fourth-ranking Republican on the Financial Services committee and also serves as Chairman of the Domestic and International Monetary Policy Subcommittee.

Pryce also holds the title of Deputy Whip. In this role she is responsible for gauging the support of fellow Republicans for legislation on the House floor and working with other members of leadership to shape strategy on issues. Pryce's background as a prosecutor and judge and her reputation as a consensus builder have served her well in all of these leadership roles and have earned her the title of "Peacemaker."

Throughout her 14 years in office, Congresswoman Pryce has consistently fought for central-Ohio families. She has supported and authored legislation to provide tax cuts to working families; reformed welfare to help thousands of families end dependency upon the government and enter the workforce; and fought to control the size and scope of government to allow Americans to more freely pursue economic success. Additionally, Congresswoman Pryce has proven to be a strong leader in Ohio's community.

Congresswoman Pryce is perhaps best known around the country as an advocate for health issues and the protection of women and children. Pryce is a long-time proponent of adoption and serves on the Congressional Coalition on Adoption and the Board of the National Center for Adoption Law and Policy at Capital University Law School in Columbus. She led an effort in Congress to expand and make permanent an adoption tax credit to make the process more affordable for families and to remove racial barriers to adoption. Pryce has been at the forefront of efforts to secure funds for physician training at children's hospitals. Pryce has also authored laws to require drug companies to test drugs to determine their effectiveness in children and to improve palliative care for children with terminal diseases.

As co-chair of the House Cancer Caucus, Congresswoman Pryce is a key leader in the effort to defeat the disease. She co-authored a bill which will help cancer patients in rural areas receive better access to medical services through the use of "patient navigators," individuals who help patients work their way through the health care system. Pryce also secured access for seniors to life-saving oral cancer drugs in the new Medicare law.

As a former prosecutor and judge, Congresswoman Pryce has championed the rights of crime victims in Congress. She led the charge to pass legislation that protects victims of violent crime by using DNA technology. Most recently, Congresswoman Pryce was successful in her effort to crack down on those who traffic humans as part of the illicit sex trade. She authored provisions signed into law by President Bush to curb domestic demand for illegal commercial sex.

Congresswoman Pryce is a graduate of Ohio State University and Capital University Law School. She is a member of the Ohio Women's Hall of Fame, having been inducted in 2001 for her outstanding achievements in public service.

Drew Oosterbaan

Chief of the Child Exploitation & Obscenity Section, Department of Justice

DREW OOSTERBAAN received a B.A. in political science and business from Valparaiso University in 1981, and a J.D. from Chicago-Kent College of Law in 1985. Following law school, beginning in July 1986, Mr. Oosterbaan served as an Officer in the U.S. Army Judge Advocate General's Corps. At the end of this tour, he received a Meritorious Service Medal as a first-term Captain, and later served for one year as an Appellate Defense Counsel, representing soldiers before the Army Court of Military Review and the Court of Military Appeals.

In July 1990, Oosterbaan left the Army to become an Assistant United States Attorney in the Southern District of Florida, where he served for more than nine years, handling more than sixty trials and many complex grand jury investigations involving, among other things, child pornography, child abuse, public corruption, international narcotics trafficking, and violent crime.

In April 1993, Oosterbaan was promoted to Deputy Chief of the Special Prosecutions Section, where he supervised 10 to 15 Assistant United States Attorneys. Later, as the Deputy Chief of the Special Investigations Unit, Oosterbaan supervised a special section of experienced attorneys who handled unique and complex investigations in the areas of, among other things, child exploitation, narcotics trafficking, public corruption, fraud and violent crime.

In January 2000, Oosterbaan accepted the position of Deputy Chief for Litigation at the Criminal Division's Child Exploitation and Obscenity Section in Washington, D.C. In that capacity, he managed approximately 11 Trial Attorneys and a nationwide caseload of criminal investigations and prosecutions in the general areas of child exploitation, child sex trafficking, and obscenity.

On November 20, 2001, Oosterbaan was selected for the Senior Executive Service position of Chief of the Child Exploitation and Obscenity Section (CEOS), the position he presently holds. Under Oosterbaan's leadership, CEOS has had a major impact on federal policy, legislation and prosecutions in the areas of child exploitation and obscenity.

Under Oosterbaan's leadership, CEOS has conducted numerous nationwide child pornography operations, resulting in hundreds of successful prosecutions; designed and implemented a highly successful nationwide strategy against child prostitution; developed successful national impact undercover operations targeting international tourists traveling for the purpose of having sex with children; and conducted numerous major investigations and prosecutions involving the mass distribution of child pornography and obscene material. In recognition of his leadership, the Attorney General recently presented him with the John Marshall Award for Outstanding Legal Achievement for Participation in Litigation.

As Chief of CEOS, Oosterbaan regularly counsels Departmental leadership on critical policy matters in the areas of child exploitation and obscenity, and has been integrally involved in the drafting of major legislation targeting child exploitation, including the new Prosecutorial Remedies and Other Tools to End the Exploitation of Children Today Act of 2003 (the PROTECT Act®). Oosterbaan has also played a leading role in national efforts to identify victims of child pornography and to save them from further sexual abuse.

David E. Sanger

White House Correspondent
The New York Times

David E. Sanger covers the White House for The New York Times and is one of the newspaper's senior writers. In a 24-year career at the paper, he has reported from New York, Tokyo and Washington, covering a wide variety of issues surrounding foreign policy, globalization, nuclear proliferation, Asian affairs and, for the past five years, the arc of the Bush presidency. Twice he has been a member of Times reporting teams that won the Pulitzer Prize.

Before covering the White House, Mr. Sanger specialized in the confluence of economic and foreign policy, and wrote extensively on how issues of national wealth and competitiveness have come to redefine the relationships between the United States and its major allies. As a correspondent and then bureau chief in Tokyo for six years, he covered Japan's rise as the world's second largest economic power, and then its humbling recession. He also filed frequently from Southeast Asia, and wrote many of the first stories about North Korea's secret nuclear weapons program in the 1990's. He continues to cover proliferation issues from Washington.

Leaving Asia in 1994, he took up the position of chief Washington economic correspondent, and covered a series of global economic upheavals, from Mexico to the Asian economic crisis. He was named a senior writer in March, 1999, and White House correspondent later that year.

Mr. Sanger joined the Times in the Business Day section, specializing in the computer industry and high-technology trade. In 1986 he played a major role in the team that investigated the causes of the space shuttle Challenger disaster, writing the first stories about what the space agency knew about the potential flaws in the shuttle's design and revealing that engineers had raised objections to launching the shuttle. The team won the 1987 Pulitzer Prize for national reporting. He was a member of another Pulitzer-winner team that wrote about the struggles within the Clinton Administration over controlling exports to China.

In 2004, Mr. Sanger was the co-recipient of the Weintal Prize for diplomatic reporting for his coverage of the Iraq and Korea crises. He also won the Aldo Beckman prize for coverage of the presidency, awarded by the White House Correspondent's Association. The previous year he won another of the association's major prizes, the Merriman Smith Memorial Award, for coverage of the emergence of a new national security strategy for the United States. In 2004 he and four other colleagues also shared the American Society of Newspaper Editor's top award for deadline writing, for team coverage of the Columbia disaster.

Mr. Sanger appears regularly on public affairs and news shows. Twice a week he delivers the Washington Report on WQXR, the radio station of the Times. He is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations and the Aspen Strategy Group.

Born on July 5, 1960 in White Plains, N.Y., Mr. Sanger was educated in the public school system there and graduated magna cum laude in government from Harvard College in 1982.

Helen Thomas

Syndicated Columnist, Hearst Newspapers

Commonly referred to as "The First Lady of the Press," former White House Bureau Chief HELEN THOMAS is a trailblazer, breaking through barriers for women reporters while covering every President since John F. Kennedy. For 57 years, Helen also served as White House correspondent for United Press International. She recently left this post and joined Hearst Newspapers as a syndicated columnist.

Born in Winchester, Kentucky, Thomas was raised in Detroit, Michigan where she attended public schools and later graduated from Wayne State University. Upon leaving college, she served as a copy girl on the old, now defunct Washington Daily News. In 1943, Ms. Thomas joined United Press International and the Washington Press Corps.

For 12 years, Helen wrote radio news for UPI, eventually covering the news of the Federal government, including the FBI and Capitol Hill in November 1960, Thomas began covering then - President - elect John F. Kennedy, following him to the White House in January 1961 as a member of the UPI team. It was during this first White House assignment that Thomas began closing presidential press conferences with "Thank you, Mr. President."

Ms. Thomas was the only woman print journalist traveling with then President Nixon to China during his breakthrough trip in January 1972. She has the distinction of having traveled around the world several times with Presidents Nixon, Ford, Carter, Reagan, Bush, and Clinton, during the course of which she covered every Economic Summit.

The World Almanac has cited Ms. Thomas as one of the 25 Most Influential Women in America. She has written three books, including her latest, Thanks for the Memories Mr. President: Wit and Wisdom from the Front Row at the White House.
