

Passenger Pigeon Timeline

Lesson Title: Passenger Pigeons: Nomads Lost
Page 1 of 1

Name: _____

I have seen flocks streaming south in the fall so large that they were flowing over from horizon to horizon in an almost continuous stream all day long, at the rate of forty or fifty miles an hour, like a mighty river in the sky, widening, contracting, descending like falls and cataracts, and rising suddenly here and there in huge ragged masses like high-splashing spray. (Muir, 1913)