din Shirazi.

The tomb of Aurangzeb is situated at the south eastern corner of the tomb of Zain-ud-din complex, who died in 1370 AD. It is remarkably simple in keeping with Aurangzeb's own wishes. It is said that Aurangzeb funded his resting place with only Rs. 14 and 12 annas by knitting caps during the last years of his life. Only a patch of earth with small sabza plant remains on top, and it is roofed only by the vault of the sky. This modest open-air grave in expresses Aurangze's deep devotion to his Islamic beliefs. The existing gateway and domed porch were added in 1760 AD. The floor is of marble, a net railing of perforated marble is on three sides, and the wall of dargah of the Sufi saint Shaikh Burham-u'd-din Gharib (died 1331), forms the fourth side. A marble plaque in one of the corners reads Aurangzeb's epithet as Al-Sultan al-Azam wal Khaqan al-Mukarram Hazrat Abul Muzaffar Muhy-ud-Din Muhammad Aurangzeb Bahadur Alamgir I, Badshah Ghazi, Shahanshah-e-Sultanat-ul-Hindiya Wal Mughaliya. It was erected by the Nizam of Hyderabad. This large funerary complex also consists of the graves of Aurangzeb's son Azam Shah along with his wife.
