I Introduction

This paper looks at the results of the 1997 General Election. It contains summary results by country, region and county. The paper is a re-issue of a previous paper, 97/49, and now contains validated results that are consistent with those produced in Britain Votes 6, Rallings & Thrasher, 1997. The paper also includes additional tables showing results at constituency level, along with lists of seats by marginality.

The 1997 election was notable in many ways. Labour's 13.5 million votes have only been exceeded in 1951 and the party's share of 43.2% was its highest since 1966. The 418 seats won were the party's most ever, and compare with 393 won in 1945. The Conservatives' 9.6 million votes was the party's lowest total since 1929 and their share of 30.7% the lowest since 1832. Their 165 seats were the party's fewest since 1906. The Liberal Democrats' 5.2 million votes were fewer than in 1992, as was the party's share of the vote, but 46 seats represents the party's most since 1929, when it won 56<sup>1</sup>.

Turnout at the election was relatively low, at 71.5%; this is the lowest national level of turnout since 1935.

The boundaries of many seats were redrawn before the 1997 election and any comparisons with 1992 shown in subsequent tables use the notional results for 1992 based on the new boundaries, taken from work by Colin Rallings and Michael Thrasher of the University of Plymouth.<sup>2</sup>

A record number of women were elected in 1997. In all, 120 women MPs were returned, double the number in 1992. Of these, 101 were Labour, 13 Conservative, three Liberal Democrat, two SNP and one was the Speaker.

Table 1a to 1e look at the summary results by country while Tables 2 to 7 show results by region. Table 8 shows changes in the number of seats won compared with 1992, while Tables 9 and 10 look at turnout. Tables 11a and 11b show the highest and lowest majorities by party, Table 12 shows the highest and lowest shares of the vote by party while Table 13 looks at changes in share. The number of candidates finishing in first, second, third, fourth and fifth place by party is given in Table 14. Tables 15 to 17 look at the results by county and Tables 18 to 24 look at constituency results, including lists by marginality.

Tables 18 and 22-24 show the names of the Members elected at the 1997 General Election; 16 of these have changed.
