NOTE FOR THE READER

George Campbell's book Scottish Amateur Internationals and Internationalists 1927-1974 is the seminal work on the Scottish amateur team. First published in 1985 and revised in 1990, the book is long out of print but still in demand as a major source of reference. We decided, with George's family's permission, to publish a third edition. This would add more information on matches with the on-line access to newspaper archives and other records that George would not have been able to utilise.

We started with George's original text that had the Scottish line-ups. Alongside checking these details we added the opposition line-ups and other match details that we could find from other sources. The decision was then taken to extend this research to include all matches played by the other Home Nations and the Great Britain Olympic XI. This information has come from many different sources; newspapers, match programmes and other historical records. In some cases the format of the name for the same player is different. The main difference is the initials for given names. Sometimes only one initial is used but at other times all are listed in the press. Sometimes the newspaper report may transpose initials. At other times players will have military ranks.

We have tried our best to identify and correct different name formats initially appearing as different players that are in fact the same player. However, we have only combined these records when we have been confident to do so, there are others that may remain.

For example, Lieutenant-Colonel Kenneth Edward Hegan OBE commonly known as "Jackie" is recorded in different sources as

KE Hegan (Corinthians)

KE Hegan (The Army)

Lt KE Hegan (The Army)

Capt KE Hegan (The Army)

In our records his playing record is shown under:

Hegan KE (also Lt & Capt)

Welsh amateur internationalist Emyr ab Iorwerth is shown in different sources as:

E Ab Iorwerth (Arsenal)

Ap Iorwerth (Arsenal)

E ap Iorwerth (Tooting and Mitcham United)

E ap Iorwerth (Porthmadoc, capt)

E Ab Iorwerth (Arsenal)

E Ap Iorwerth (Porthmadoc, capt)

In our records his playing record is shown under:

ab Iorwerth E

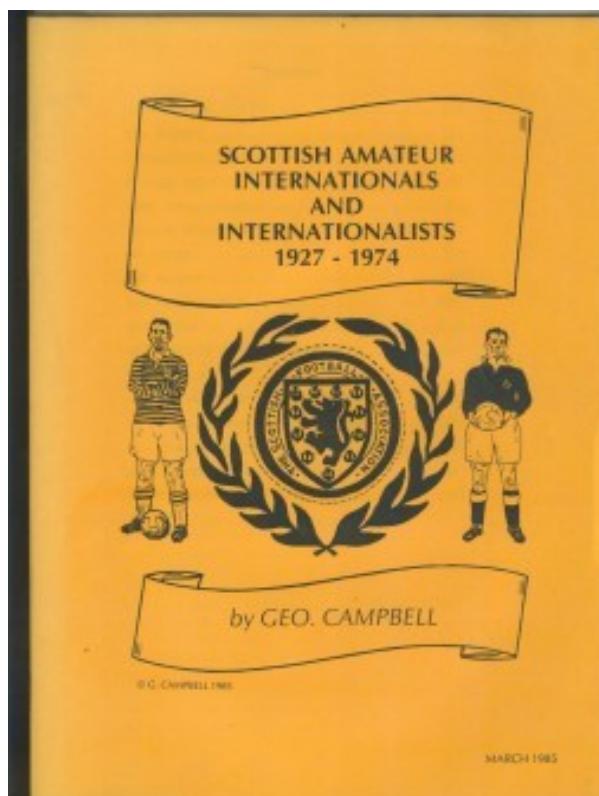

These examples were fairly straightforward to identify and combine. However, this is particularly difficult when we dealt with players sharing more common surnames and playing around the same period.

Please do let us know if in the players' listings there are separate records for the same player so that we can correct the record. Indeed do let us know if you have information that may fill the few gaps in the records.

We have unashamedly used George Campbell's introduction to his book Scottish Amateur Internationals and Internationalists 1927-1974. The only changes we have made to the introduction is where, through better access to information, we have revised some of the appearance totals, etc. For all intents and purposes this is George's introduction.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Firstly we thank George Campbell's family for allowing us to re-edit and update his book. Andy Mitchell got the ball rolling after getting in touch with his son Neil who passed onto us George's original work which was retained on computer discs.

Cover of George's original work

Given the scope of this revised edition, it was inevitable that there would have been some gaps in our research. We would therefore like to thank Ian Garland, contributor to the Welsh Football Data Archive (www.wfda.co.uk), who supplied many of the Welsh line-ups. Special thanks also go to John Treleven, for helping us with England's games as well as supplying dates and results of many of England and GB's trial matches which we were able to expand upon, and Graham Frost for help with filling many gaps in those matches and correcting a number of errors concerning dub detail. Gwidon Niskrent of the excellent Facebook group Football Lineups and Results Research was exceptionally helpful supplying press cuttings regarding many trial matches from the 1950s and 1960s. The group also excelled in supplying many opposition details that were omitted from the first edition.

Two websites in particular were of great use and are well worth visiting.

Northern Ireland's Footballing Greats site at (www.nifootball.blogspot.co.uk). This has extensive biographies of all of the Province's internationalists at all levels.

Similarly England Football Online (www.EnglandFootballOnline.com) also features extensive research on all aspects of England's international matches and should be in everyone's favourites.

Finally, other members of the Non League Matters forum (www.nonleaguematters.co.uk) and scottishleague.net (www.scottishleague.net/forum) were most helpful in answering our many queries.

There have been very few books written especially about amateur internationals, however two works have been very useful; GB United? British Olympic Football and the End of the Amateur Dream (Pitch Publishing, 2010) by Steve Menery is an extensive account of Britain's Olympic campaigns, while Association Football (Caxton Publishing, 1960) has some interesting chapters on the subject.

INTRODUCTION BY GEORGE CAMPBELL (From his original work)

Football is the biggest participation sport in the world and probably the simplest to play. The majority of participants engage in it for pleasure rather than financial gain and thus conform to the definition of amateurs, although many of them play in a far from amateurish way!

When football was growing in popularity during the 1800s, all of the players were amateurs. Within ten years of the start of organised football, players were being offered money for their services and skills. Much concern was being expressed about this with the legislators of the day but as interest in the sport grew, more and more money was drawn to the game. It was inevitable that professionalism would result and in fact this was officially recognised in England in 1885 and in Scotland in 1893.

Many people felt that the spirit of the game had been lost when professionalism was introduced and wanted nothing further to do with the sport. Others were determined however to keep the amateur footballer to the forefront and one of the vehicles for this was amateur internationals.

Nowadays, with amateurism at this level having become a dead issue, records related to Scottish Amateur Internationals had become very hard to find. This article is written to once again give the amateur his day, particularly as regards to Scottish participation in international play.

THE AMATEUR

The amateur played the game as a game and as such became a separate person and was identified as such by having the initial of his first name put in front of his surname on team lists. The full-time professionals looked with disdain on part-time players and amateurs who they believed looked on football as 'only a game'. They felt that there was no place for the amateur in League football and that they were keeping a fellow professional out of a job. Given such a hostile environment it is dear why so few amateur international players were attached to League clubs.

The essence of amateurism is the freedom of the player to go or stay season to season or even game to game, dependent on his circumstances or whims without burdens of contracts and binding transfer regulations. Amateur players normally fell into three categories:-

- (a) The comparatively rare 'genuine amateur'
- (b) Those whose professions (eg: Banking or the Civil Service) made professional football impractical or inadvisable, and
- (c) Those who were not quite up to professional standards.

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

International football started officially in 1872 when teams representing Scotland and England met at the West of Scotland cricket ground in Partick, Glasgow. Those were the days of pure amateurism and the Scotland team was made up completely of Queen's Park members; then the best team in Scotland. The game ended as a 0-0 draw. These games became an annual event and were augmented by games against Wales in 1876 and Ireland in 1884.

After the adoption of professionalism in 1893, Scotland still, for a time in representative games, had a mixture of amateurs and professionals but the number of amateurs to receive caps decreased to a trickle between the First and Second World Wars. From the recognition of professionalism up to the Second World War, thirty-one amateurs from Queen's Park played for Scotland in full internationals. No amateur players were capped for Scotland in full internationals after the Second World War.

The last amateur players to play at 'full international' level were JR (Tony) Harris (later Aberdeen), Ken Chisholm (later Partick Thistle and Sunderland) and RB (Bobby) Brown. All three were with Queen's Park at the time and played in the Victory Internationals in 1944-45 and 1945-46. Brown was also Scotland's goalkeeper in wartime games while serving in the R.A.F. Then after playing in unofficial games against England (twice), Ireland, Wales and Belgium while an amateur with Queen's Park, he turned professional with Rangers and continued to hold down the full international goal-keeper position for a couple of seasons. Later he was a Scotland team manager.

Queen's Park are still a novelty, an amateur club playing in top-class football, but in recent years the club has been confined to the lower divisions and it is unlikely that an amateur will ever again don a full international jersey

AMATEUR INTERNATIONALS

Amateur internationals for Scotland began in 1926-27 when a game against England was played at Leicester. Scotland won 4-1. Amateur internationals against Ireland and Wales followed in season 1928-29. All these games became annual events, with England and Ireland as opponents each season up until 1938-39 while the last pre-war game against Wales was in 1936-37. The SFA selected the teams until the war, then the Scottish Amateur FA did the honours from 1949-1954 before it reverted back to the Scottish FA. The fixtures ended in 1974, when the Football Association ended the distinction between amateur and professional players; however, the Scottish Amateur FA has continued to field representative teams for matches.

Amateur internationals commenced again in season 1948-49 when games against England and Ireland were played. The Welsh games did not restart until the following season.

The strongest opposition was usually provided by England and in these games a large number of Queen's Park players were used. The Ireland and Wales games were used to give amateur players from other clubs the opportunity for some recognition. Players from the Highland League, East of Scotland League, English amateur clubs, Scottish Universities, Junior clubs and miscellaneous teams from the various Scottish regional amateur leagues were utilised, augmented by a few players from Queen's Park or other League clubs.

Post-war amateur internationals against the other home countries continued to be played annually right through until season 1973-74 when games against England and Wales were last played. The last game against Northern Ireland was played in season 1972-73.

At this time England disposed of the terms amateur and professional all simply became players. With the demise of the English Amateur Cup in 1974 they decided also to drop amateur internationals from their schedule which was already busy with under-23, under-21 and 'B' internationals.

Outside of the home countries, Scotland played its first 'foreign' amateur international against the Republic of Ireland in 1952 (although there was a curious fixture with Denmark in 1932) and the last against France in 1974. Altogether 26 of these games were played with the highlight being the final of the UEFA Nations Amateur Cup in 1967. With each country having a different definition of an amateur, not many inter-country games occurred at this level particularly as all the interest at this time was being focused on such as the World Cup (and its qualifying competition), the European Nations Cup, and the various European club championship competitions. In the international games played by Scotland, the majority of the players used were from Queen's Park.

HOME INTERNATIONALS

The annual home international competition was usually won by England who had the resources to draw on which the other countries could not match. Although the competition wasn't officially endorsed until 1953-54, the press had been declaring champions since 1929. The winners each year were:-

1928-29 *	England	5 pts	1954-55	England	5 pts
1929-30 *	Scotland	6 pts	1955-56	England & N Ireland	4 pts
1930-31 *	England & Scotland	4 pts	1956-57	England	5 pts
1931-32 *	England	4 pts	1957-58	England, Scotland & N Ireland	4 pts
1932-33 *	England	4 pts	1958-59	England & Scotland	4 pts
1933-34 *	Scotland	4 pts	1959-60	England	5 pts
1934-35 *	England	6 pts	1960-61	England	5 pts

1951-52 *	Scotland	6 pts	1971-72	Northern Ireland	6 pts
1952-53 *	England	5 pts	1972-73	England	6 pts
1953-54	Northern Ireland	5 pts	1973-74 	England & Wales	4 pts

* Note: All of the games were not played, eg: Ireland and Wales did not meet regularly until 1954.

 Scotland and Northern Ireland did not play due to civil unrest in Northern Ireland.

FOREIGN ENCOUNTERS

Games outside of the home internationals as far as Scotland were concerned did not start until season 1951-52 when a game was played in Dublin against the Republic of Ireland. In season 1953-54 the return was played at Celtic Park, Glasgow.

The next foreign venture was at the end of season 1955-56 when Scotland embarked on a tour of Europe where games against West Germany, Switzerland 'B' and Netherlands were played. The teams for these games were completely made up of Queen's Parkers apart from Anglo-Scot, George Taylor of Hounslow Town. Part of the arrangement of these games was that return home games would be played in Scotland and games against West Germany and Netherlands did take place in the late 1950s.

From these seven games Scotland could only muster one win, three draws and three losses. The next venture against foreign competition was however much more successful.

To celebrate the centenary of the Football Association, the F.A. ran an amateur international invitational tournament in the North-East of England in May 1963. The eight teams invited were divided into two sections:- England, France, West Germany and Netherlands in one group while Scotland were matched against Republic of Ireland, Italy and Switzerland.

Ireland and Italy were well beaten by 5-1 and 3-1 scores respectively. A 1-1 draw against Switzerland was enough to put Scotland into the final against West Germany. Although hard pressed in the first-half, Scotland came on to their game in the second-half to win by 5 goals to 2. George Boardman and Peter Buchanan, both of Queen's Park, were Scotland's top goal-scorers in these games. Boardman particularly drew much attention by his performance and the first year Queen's Park player was signed to a professional contract immediately following this competition by Shrewsbury Town and he played with them for many seasons.

In December 1963, Scotland once again went abroad, this time travelling further afield to East Africa. Independence had been granted to Kenya and the new government held an international football tournament as part of the celebrations. Since the game in Africa was amateur, Scotland was asked to furnish an amateur team. The other competing nations were Uganda and Tanganyika. Scotland beat Uganda 3-0 and then trounced Tanganyika 7-2.

In the final Kenya won by 3-2; a result favoured by all but the Scottish players!

Having now established a presence on a wider international front, Scotland elected to take part in the European amateur tournament, newly established and scheduled to be played every four years. They were drawn against Republic of Ireland and Wales in qualifying play. Ireland were defeated twice by a 4-0 score. The Welsh games were played over two seasons as part of the home championship, and one was won and one drawn. Scotland, therefore, qualified for the final games to be played in Spain in June 1967. Four countries qualified, being Scotland, Austria, Turkey and Spain. Scotland defeated Spain 3-1 in one semi-final and Austria defeated Turkey 1-0 in the other. In the final, two days later, Scotland lost narrowly to Austria by 2 goals to 1.

Scotland did not play any further games against foreign countries until the qualifying rounds of the next European trophy were due. Then they faced Netherlands and lost 3-0 away from home and although they won 1-0 at home this was not enough to permit them to advance any further in this competition. This competition was completed in Forti-del-Marmi in Italy where Italy defeated Spain and Netherlands to take the Championship.

In 1973-74 Scotland again faced Netherlands and France in home and away games but could only garner one point from their four games. Their last game was away to France where they drew 1-1 and this was to be their last foreign venture.

THE CLUBS

Queen's Park, Scotland's premier amateur club, have a massive scouting system and most of the top amateur players in the country are attracted to this great club who look after their players really well and give them the opportunity to play in top class League soccer. No Scottish amateur international team was ever fielded without including at least one Queen's Park player in the line-up. They gave Scotland 191 amateur international players who between them made 943 appearances for their country at this level. As previously stated, 31 players turned out for Scotland at the full international level from 1893 until 1939. Of these, only six played during the period between 1926, when amateur internationals started, and the beginning of the Second World War. These were:-

WS Chalmers, JM Crawford, R Gillespie, JD Harkness, WS King and W Wiseman. All of these players also figured strongly in the amateur internationals played at that time.

What of the other clubs? The number of players supplied by them was minimal when compared to Queen's Park's 191. The others rate as follows:-

15	Players from -	Edinburgh City
10	Players from -	Glasgow University
7	Players from -	Edinburgh University, The Army & Jordanhill Training College
6	Players from -	Kilmarnock
5	Players from -	Dumbarton, London Caledonians & Murrayfield Amateurs
4	Players from -	Albion Rovers, Dundee United, East Stirlingshire, Heart of Midlothian, Partick Thistle, Third Lanark, Babcock and Wilcox, Spartans, Falkirk Amateurs & Hounslow Town
3	Players from -	Airdrieonians, Celtic, Clyde, Dunfermline Athletic, Hibernian, St Mirren, St Bernard's, Irvine Meadow XI, Bishop Auckland, Romford, Vale of Leithen & Third Lanark
2	Players from -	16 Clubs
1	Player from -	77 Clubs

Edinburgh City were formed in 1928 and joined the Scottish League Second Division in 1931. They were intended to be the "Queen's Park of the East" but they could not attract the standard of player who could make them into a winning combination and they languished in the lower region of the league, often having record scores posted against them. They ceased to exist as an amateur club at the onset of the Second World War and the football section went defunct in 1954. The social club continued to exist and the football club was resurrected in 1986.

Two Glasgow clubs, Glasgow University and Jordanhill Training College, along with Edinburgh University are next in line to Queen's Park and Edinburgh City. These institutions of learning also provided a "goodly" number of amateur international players.

Glasgow University maintain strong links with the Queen's Park club. They played in the Glasgow based Scottish Amateur League and are perennial challengers in the Qualifying Cup. In the mid-1960s they played in the Combined Reserve League with the reserve squads of many of the League Clubs.

Jordanhill Training College is Scotland's main institution of Physical Education; a career where sporting prowess in many sports is, of course, essential. In the 60s the College authorities made it mandatory that students attending the College play for the College teams and this certainly raised the team standards, being particularly noticeable in the rugby and football teams. The football team competed at that time with Glasgow University in the Combined Reserve League. They also played in the Scottish Amateur League.

Edinburgh University were one of the original strong football clubs in the early formative years of football and have always fielded a strong amateur team in the East of Scotland League.

Murrayfield Amateurs were a well-known and well-respected Edinburgh club prior to the Second World War but went defunct in the early 1960s (their ground at Pinkhill on the west side of Edinburgh has since been built on). They played in the 1930s in the Edinburgh and District League and then in the East of Scotland League. Murrayfield's place in Edinburgh amateur football circles has now been taken up by the Spartans club.

The University teams of the four "old established" schools (Glasgow, Edinburgh, St Andrews and Aberdeen) played in local leagues and played each other annually for the Queen's Park Shield. These games, together with University Internationals and Qualifying Cup games, were a showcase for many of their players, resulting in quite a bit of international recognition for their players.

During the period in question, ten Scottish League dubs did not provide any Scottish amateur international players. These were:

Aberdeen, Berwick Rangers, Brechin City, Falkirk, Forfar Athletic, Meadowbank Thistle (previously Ferranti Thistle, now Livingston), Morton, Rangers, St Johnstone and Stirling Albion; neither did Stirling's former League dub King's Park which went defunct during World War II. It is surprising to note, however, that Aberdeen, Berwick, Falkirk, Greenock and Perth were all amateur international venues.

In 1968, K Watson, a provisional signing for Rangers, then playing for Salvesen Boys' Club, played against Ireland and has his dub listed in some reference books as Rangers.

Former League dubs who had representative player at this level were:- Arthurlie, Edinburgh City, Leith Athletic, St Bernard's and Third Lanark.

Many of the leading amateurs in Scotland were involved in business and commerce and their jobs took them across the border into England where they turned out for some of the leading dubs in England including: Bishop Auckland, Bromley, Hendon, Hounslow Town, Ilford, London Caledonians, Kingstonian, Romford, Woking and others.

English League dubs to provide players were:- Darlington, Leeds United, Sheffield United and Queen's Park Rangers.

THE PLAYERS

In the home internationals 360 players made a total of 1,185 appearances. Of the players, 49% were from one dub, Queen's Park. The percentage relative to appearances was 62% from the same dub. This figure is indicative of the consistency of some of the Queen's Park players who, playing regularly at a top level, could more easily handle representative play.

Considering the most appearances by a player or players attached to a dub over all amateur internationals played, the dubs are rated thus, (top 14 dubs only):-

943 appearances	-	Queen's Park
25 appearances	-	Hounslow Town
23 appearances	-	Edinburgh City
18 appearances	-	Glasgow University, Airdrieonians & Murrayfield Amateurs
17 appearances	-	Kilmarnock & Edinburgh University
16 appearances	-	Albion Rovers & Bishop Auckland
14 appearances	-	Heart of Midlothian & Jordanhill Training College
12 appearances	-	Partick Thistle
10 appearances	-	Dunfermline Athletic

Hounslow Town owe their exalted position primarily to one player, George Taylor, who played at full-back from 1955 to 1961 making in total 15 appearances.

Airdrieonians' position is due to Willie Neil who played with them as an amateur between 1956 and 1961. At that time he decided to join Queen's Park and in their colours he continued to be a regular in amateur international teams until 1971. He was the most capped Scottish amateur appearing 31 times in home internationals and 14 times against foreign opposition. The player who came closest to Willie Neil was Bert Cromar of Queen's Park with 25 home international appearances and 10 against foreign teams.

Some of the players capped had similar names but normally a significant time period had elapsed between them so as to cause no confusion. One name that did occur twice in close succession however was M Murray. The first Matt Murray, who played for Queen's Park until 1952 when he turned professional with Kilmarnock. He was a left-winger and was capped four times, against England, Ireland, Wales and Republic of Ireland. The second was Max Murray who left Queen's Park in 1955, accepting professional terms with Rangers. He was primarily a centre-forward and was capped five times for Amateur Scotland between 1953 and 1955.

In Olympic Games football, Great Britain fielded a team. This was primarily the England amateur international team but trial games and friendly internationals were played and players from the other home countries were given the opportunity of staking their claim for a place.

Scotland's representation was again mainly from Queen's Park. Among those who did duty for Great Britain were:-

JM Crawford, JM Dodds and JR Kyle in 1936; A Boyd, J Farquhar, D Letham, RC Simpson, DM McBain and J McColl in 1948; and T Stewart, DD Holt, JH Devlin, FC Buchanan and W Neil in subsequent Olympiads.

THE PERSONALITIES

The players who appeared in amateur internationals fell mainly into two categories; those who were out and out amateurs and remained so all their playing days, and other players who distinguished themselves with Queen's Park and then left the amateur dub while at the height of their career to try for even higher honours with the strongest professional teams of the day. In most professional teams, amateur players were not made particularly welcome as in moving to these dubs the players became professionals.

In the early '60s there was a trend towards granting amateur international honours to youth players and there was an outcry in the press and among 'true blue' amateur fans when the selectors capped Alex Edwards of Dunfermline Athletic. Edwards was only an amateur because he was too young to be signed to a professional contract and was in fact about to sign such a contract the day after the game against England.

Also, a youthful Peter Lorimer, then an apprentice with Leeds United, was a key member of the Scottish amateur team which took part in and won the FA Tournament held at Bishop Auckland in 1963. He also went on tour to Africa later that year when Scotland played in the Kenya Independence Tournament, Strangely enough, although he played in all of these games, he did not gain a cap against any of the home countries. Other youth players honoured came from Salvesen Boys' Club, the secondary juvenile dub, Campsie Black Watch and Thornliebank Youth Club.

Many prominent players helped the amateur international team in its quest for honours. Before the Second World War these included:-

Jack Harkness (Queen's Park and later with Heart of Midlothian), James Crawford and Bob Gillespie (Queen's Park), Bunty McDonald (Murrayfield Amateurs) and the tall, gangly TG Smith, goalkeeper of Queen's Park, Ayr United and St Bernard's. The Very Rev RL Small, former Moderator of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, then a student at Edinburgh University and goalkeeper for the Second Division dub, St Bernard's, was capped for amateur Scotland v England in 1929.

Other notable players who appeared in post-war amateur internationals, all while with Queen's Park, included:-

Alex Ferguson, a player with many dubs and more recently manager of Aberdeen and Manchester United; George Herd, later of Clyde and Sunderland and a full international; Ronnie Simpson of Newcastle United and Celtic, also a full international. Others were:-

Bobby Clark (Aberdeen), Alec Glen (Dundee), Bert McCann (Motherwell), Johnny Valentine, Johnny Little and Derek Grierson (all Rangers) and Jim Cruikshank and David Holt (both Heart of Midlothian).

Cruikshank and Holt while with Queen's Park, at the same time as gaining amateur honours turned out for Scotland in Under-23 internationals.

Andy Roxburgh, a future Scotland team manager, had a long career with Jordanhill Training College, Queen's Park, East Stirlingshire and ES Clydebank. When he gave up playing he dedicated himself to coaching with the Scottish FA and successfully steered Scotland to World Cup Finals. He had belied the notion that an international team manager must have been a top class professional player. Roxburgh was capped three times for Amateur Scotland in 1963 and 1964.

From a dedicated amateur standpoint, Queen's Parkers', Junior Omand, Bert Cromar, Ian Harnett, Charlie Gilmour, Tom Barr, Eddie Hunter and Malcolm Mackay gave sterling service to the amateur game both with Queen's Park and Scotland.

These players along with Tom Stewart (Queen's Park, Bishop Auckland and Hounslow Town), Lindsay Hodge (Ayr United and Albion Rovers), Doug Grant (Elgin City and Queen's Park), George Taylor and Willie Neil were the backbone of Scottish amateur international football.

It is interesting to note that David Letham, one of Queen's Park's finest players and a president of the Scottish League gained his only amateur international cap against Wales at Ebbw Vale in 1951.

The chairman of the Scottish Amateur International Committee in the 1960s and early 1970s was Mr TM (Tom) Paterson, and he worked tirelessly to ensure that any amateur of note was discovered and given a chance of international recognition. Trial games against League dubs, district amateur leagues and various select teams (eg British Police Select), were held on a regular basis to test out these players. When it came to the actual international selection, experience usually decreed that a Queen's Park player 'got the nod', but when the reserve team was announced the dubs represented were many and various. Rhu Amateurs, Cartha Athletic, King's Park FP, Fenwick Thistle and many others being recognized.

Amateur players had the option of being able to pursue other sporting activities without prejudicing contracts with their football dub. Two Scottish players who stood out as all-rounders in the post-war era were George Wilson and Donald Ford.

Wilson played in goal for Queen's Park, Hawick Royal Albert and Netherlee while gaining football honours but his first love was rugby and he played as full-back for Melrose, Selkirk and Edinburgh Wanderers rugby dubs while also playing soccer. In 1974, he decided to concentrate on rugby although at that time he was in line for Olympic football honours.

Donald Ford not only gained amateur international caps but on turning professional (still with Heart of Midlothian), he gained 3 full international caps. He was also a Scottish international cricketer and could be classed in this regard as Scotland's equivalent of Denis and Leslie Compton, Willie Watson and Trevor Bailey.

THE VENUES

A large number of home games were played at Scotland's international home – Hampden Park. With so many Queen's Park players normally included in the team, this gave Scotland an advantage. The opportunity was taken, however, of playing some of the games in provincial centres not normally graced with representative games. Crowds, however, were usually small as the amateur game did not excite a lot of interest in Scotland. The home games were distributed thus:-

Games v England		Games v Wales
14 in Glasgow		4 in Dumfries
1 in Aberdeen		3 in Glasgow
1 in Dumfries	19 games at home	2 in Perth
1 in Dundee	20 games away	1 in Ayr
1 in Falkirk		1 in Berwick	17 games at home
1 in Inverness		1 in Edinburgh	16 games away
		1 in Greenock
		1 in Hawick
		1 in Inverness
		1 in Kilmarnock
		1 in Paisley
Games v Ireland		Games v Foreign Opposition
7 in Glasgow		4 in Glasgow

POSTSCRIPT

Scottish amateur international teams were selected by the Scottish FA. When the programme was discontinued, the Scottish Amateur FA, which is affiliated to the Scottish FA, picked representative teams and played domestically against other affiliated bodies such as:- Scottish Command (The Army), Scottish Police Association, East of Scotland League and Scotland Secondary Juvenile Association. These selections are confined to players from member clubs; no Queen's Park first team players or players from professional clubs are selected.

Scotland amateur international cap awarded to Robert Murray

A quick look into the records produced some interesting information on the amateur internationalists. The following list is not intended to be exhaustive.

TRIAL AND REPRESENTATIVE MATCHES

Selectors made extensive use of trial matches to assess potential internationalists. Until 1938, England had an annual North v South or England v The Rest match, these being supplemented by a Southern Counties v Northern Counties fixture for the Linburgh Cup. Although this latter game was classed as an unofficial trial match, it was viewed by the press as an integral part of the Trial programme. Scotland and Wales also conducted extensive trial fixtures up and just after World War Two. These fixtures were replaced post-war by representative matches against various opponents, mainly professional League clubs. Listed below are the results of nearly all such matches. Unfortunately at this time, the Scottish and in particular the Welsh fixtures are incomplete.

Scotland's Trial Matches

Scotland's main fixture was the annual East v West match which was played alternately at eastern and western grounds. The game was preceded by a fixture between sides representing Fife and North of Tay, with the better players hoping to gain a place in the East XI. It appears that these types of fixtures were dispensed with in the late 1940s.

28 Sep 1929 West v East 3-3
