EXPLORERS HUNT FOR PINK DUCK

Expedition to Make Another Trip to India.

GET VALUABLE SPECIMENS

"The pink-headed duck of Nepal is probably extinct," said Arthur S. Vernay, one of the principals of the Vernay-Fauntorpe Indian expedition. In an interview at the American Museum of Natural History, Seventy-seventh street and Central park West, New York. Although the expedition failed to obtain specimens of this rare bird, it presented the museum with an absolutely unique collection of groups of the great mammals of the Indian plains and plans another trip to secure specimens of the Schomburgk deer of Burma, a creature that has never been seen by white men.

The Vernay-Fauntorpe expedition recently completed a six months' visit in Oudh, Nepal, Mysore and Burma. The expedition was financed entirely by Mr. Vernay as an individual British tribute to American participation in the World war. The other principal, Lieut. Col. J. C. Fauntorpe, is aide-camp to King George and British commissioner to Lucknow. Mr. Vernay is well known in New York as an art connoisseur, big game hunter, and is also engaged in the export business at 12 East Forty-fifth street. The party received invaluable cooperation from Lord Rending, viceroy of India, the Maharajah of Nepal and other native princes, and Sir Harcourt Butler, British governor general of Burma.

Secure Big Collection.

The result of the first hunt is a magnificent collection of groups, male, female and young, of the tiger, leopard, elephant, one-horned Indian rhinoceros, nilghu, swandeer, isine (a kind of bison), birds, particularly hornbills and reptiles. There is a total of 450 specimens of all species, including 250 birds, 110 mammals, 30 snakes, as well as other reptiles, scorpions and a number of insects. The expedition left New York on November 1, 1922. It lasted 185 days, and covered 10,300 miles by rail, 570 by motor, 350 on elephant back, 850 on foot, with short distances by bullock-cart, camel and horse. A taxidermist, an ornithologist and a photographer accompanied the party. The latter was Lieut. Commander D. M. Dyer, famous for his war photography in the British navy. His work is represented by a magnificent collection of 1,000 still photographs and 20,000 feet of film. These have been presented to the museum with the specimens. The film will be exhibited for the benefit of the New York board of education. It includes 51 seconds of film of the great one-horned Indian rhinoceros, a tiger charging an elephant and other spectacular scenes.

There was no unnecessary killing, said Mr. Vernay, and no wounded animals were allowed to escape. They killed three elephants, including a fifty-year-old tusker of unusual size, standing nine and a half feet at the shoulder. These were shot in Mysore and 150 coolies were needed to carry the skins and skeleton to the rail head. Lord Rending professed great interest in the tiger group and asked that it be presented to the museum in his own name. The rhinoceros were obtained only through the courtesy of the Maharajah of Nepal, in whose kingdom only it is found. It is becoming extinct, as its flesh and blood are thought to possess medicinal qualities by the natives, although to kill it implies a 2,000 rupee fine for the first offense and capital punishment for the second. The Maharajah co-operated in violating his own laws, providing elephants and 100 coolies. Three specimens were obtained.

"Ringing Tigers."

The methods by which the party got specimens of tigers is known as "ringing tigers." This sport required 38 elephants, six guns and 638 men. A buffalo was left as bait in the jungle. The tiger killed the beast and gorged on the meat, afterward sleeping until next evening. Natives found the tiger, and a narrowing ring of elephants surrounded the lair and closed in on the beast. When the ring was about 100 yards in diameter a big tusker was sent in to drive out the tiger. The tiger, on emerging, would make a jump and try to climb on an elephant's head. "It is very important," explained Mr. Vernay, "to shoot the tiger before this can happen." Five tigers were caught.

The taine, a kind of wild hison, is, according to Mr. Vernay, exceedingly wary, lives on wild orchids and other tropical vegetation, and lies down watching its own track for signs of a pursuer. If wounded it will circle upward, track down and attack its enemy. Mr. Vernay will return for a further four months' hunt in Burma and Siam, in the hope of procuring specimens of the Schomburgk deer and of the giant Siamese tortoise.

AMERICAN COMEDY FILMS ARE POPULAR IN EUROPE

Old World, Fed Up on Tragedy, Turns to Movies Made in U. S. for Its Laughs.

Munich.—Europeans are getting somewhat muddled in their conceptions of American life.

For years cowboys represented American mankind to Europe. The British comic papers and the British stage gave Europe its pictures of life in the United States. Then the movies came to the fore, and Europe insisted on having films which would not violate its notions on how Americans look and act.

Films of conventional life in the United States apparently do not appeal to European crowds. At any rate, they are never shown.

The ordinary European film is so slow in its action that the movie houses rely very largely on American films for their "pep" and comedy. Europe produces tragedies without end. Italy, Spain, France and Germany stage sorrow and grief. Sweden also supplies many tear wringers and Russia is beginning to send soulful films into the houses of western Europe. So it remains for the Americans to supply something sniffling and lively.

Europe has starved and fought and suffered so long that it wants a change. European comedians have tried to make their fellow countrymen laugh, but they have failed so far in their efforts to produce first-class comedy films. Even the third-rate American comedies are more successful in Europe than the films in which the leading comedians of Europe have been featured.

Comic nights are frequently advertised in German film theaters, when only the comic films of certain American favorites are shown. German producers, German actors and many of the German critics denounce American comic films as foolish and inartistic, but the public crowds the theaters when they are shown and pays its hard-earned marks for a chance to laugh.

SHIPS WORTH $225,703,315

U. S. Merchant Fleet Consists of 1,334 Craft.

The United States merchant fleet today is worth $225,703,315. In the opinion of shipping board experts at Washington, who have just completed an extensive survey.

Taking world-market conditions, the experts, after considering types, capacity, machinery, loading devices and like factors, placed the world's first valuation on the 1,334 craft making up the fleet.

Of the entire fleet 416 ships are in operation or ready for spot delivery, of a value of $137,311,950, while 822 laid-up vessels are valued at $87,990,570, and 96 tugs are valued at $1,515,000.

The recapitulator shows 395 cargo ships ready for delivery on the spot or in operation and 802 laid up. Nineteen tankers are running or ready, while 24 are laid up. Twelve of the fourteen refrigerator ships are laid up, and all nine of the concrete tankers and cargo vessels are out of commission. Nineteen vessels are classed as "damaged and obsolete."

Of the passenger ships 80 out of the 35 are in operation or ready for spot delivery. Those not laid up are valued at $46,390,000.

The total valuation on July 1 last, was given as $227,732,615, but since then six ships were sold for $900,300, the announcement of the shipping board said.
