Kannada-English Etymological Dictionary

Introduction

Short History of Kannada Lexicography

The oldest available dictionary of Kannada is Ranna Kanda written by the poet Ranna in 996 AD. It is in the form of verse and was intended to help the poets to compose their poetical works. In 1045 AD, Nāgavarma prepared Abhidhāna Vastukōśa, a more detailed work. In about 1300, Viṭṭhala prepared Amarakōśada Ṭīku, followed by Abhinava Maṅgarāja, who prepared Abhinavābhidhāna in 1398. Karnāṭaka Śabdāsāra was also prepared in about 1400 by an author whose name is not known. In 1450 Caturāsya Bommarasa prepared Caturāsya Nighaṇṭu and in 1530 Liṅgamantri prepared Kabbigara Kaipīḍi. In 1560 Tōṇṭadārya wrote Karnāṭaka Śabdamaṅjari and in 1600 Śrīṅgārakavi wrote Karnāṭaka Saṃjīvana. In 1640 Sūryakavi wrote Kavi Kaṇṭha-hāra. There are a few more dictionaries written between the 17th and the 19th century, which are mainly the glossaries of Sanskrit works or commentaries on Sanskrit works. There are some others whose names and the authors only are available and the text has not been found so far.

Dictionary in modern period

The need for a good dictionary was always being felt. The Christian missionaries who came to India during British rule, started preparing dictionaries also. William Reeve prepared the first modern dictionary, Dictionary, Canarese and English in 1832. It was revised by Daniel Sanderson in 1858. John Garret prepared A Manual of Kanarese and English Dictionary in 1871. F. Ziegler prepared English Kannada School Dictionary in 1876. The culminating master dictionary Kannada English Dictionary by F. Kittel, a missionary from Germany, came out in 1893. In the mean time, a Kannada scholar Ullāl Narasingarao also prepared Kisaṃwār Glossary of Kannada Words in 1891.

Comparative and Historical Linguistic Studies

In the 19th century comparative and historical linguistic studies of Kannada and other Dravidian languages brought about sensational knowledge about human history, along with the history of Europeans, the ethnographic and linguistic history of the Aryans and the Dravidians in Iran and India. It was R. Caldwell, who applied the methods of historical and comparative method to Dravidian languages and published his book Comparative Grammar of Dravidian Languages in 1856. Kittel had a sound knowledge of all these new frontiers of linguistics.

One of the greatest work for Dravidian languages including Kannada is Dravidian Etymological Dictionary (DED) by T. Burrow and M.B. Emeneau, the first edition of which was published in 1961. This is the first etymological dictionary of Dravidian languages. Its revised edition, Dravidian Etymological Dictionary Revised (DEDR) was published in 1984. This book is a handy reference for researchers of Kannada and other Dravidian languages, to find the corresponding forms in cognate languages. It is also made available in the internet for quick reference.

Kittel's Kannada English Dictionary

Kittel's Kannada English dictionary (1893) was written with great academic interest. It included the old Kannada vocabulary also in a large quantity. The size of this dictionary is the largest of all the dictionaries written by the other missionaries. He collected the material from manuscripts also because the published books of old Kannada were a few at that time. Unfortunately, Kittel has not mentioned the name of the source where from he got the manuscripts, used by him. Now it is much more difficult to identify the source. Subsequently, most of the manuscripts are published. But we have maintained the Kittel's version in order to highlight his editorial policy. The Kittel's dictionary was revised and enlarged by M. Mariappa Bhat, and it was published in 4 volumes by the University of Madras, in 1968. We have used the revised edition of the Kittel's dictionary also. The Kittel's dictionary as published in the original form in 1893 and its revised edition published in 1968 are very useful for the students and researchers even today.

Kittel did not include in his dictionary the words containing letters ra (ರ) and la(ಳ), if the same words appeared in old Kannada, with ra (ಱ) and ra (ಱ), possibly to avoid repetition. For example kuri (ಕುರಿ) "sheep" and kūla (ಕೂಲ) "rough and mean person" are not available in his dictionary. The readers are expected to know that ra (ರ) part of the former word in old Kannada was ra (ಱ) and the part of la (ಳ) in the other word, was in old Kannada ra (ಱ) respectively. Therefore, the readers must open kuri (ಕುರಿ) for kuri (ಕುರಿ) "sheep" and kūra (ಕೂರ) for kūla (ಕೂಲ) "rough and mean person". Then only they can find the word kuri (ಕುರಿ) in the form kuri (ಕುರಿ) "sheep" and kūla (ಕೂಲ) in kūra (ಕೂರ) respectively. Sometimes he was compelled to decide which form should be included in the dictionary, the form with ra (ರ) or with ra (ಱ) and the form with la (ಳ) or with ra (ಱ). It was not always easy only with the material collected by him. He had to decide the matter by additional data in cognate languages like Tamil, Malayalam, Telugu, etc., by the methods of comparative and historical linguistics. In such cases he should have written for instance, kuri* (*ಕುರಿ) instead of kuri (ಕುರಿ) and kūra* (*ಕೂರ) instead of kūra (ಕೂರ) if these words were not attested in old Kannada, but he did not do it.

A number of dictionaries were prepared by the Kannada scholars in the early 20th century. The Kannada Sahitya Parishat, an organization for the literary activities in Kannada, got two dictionaries prepared: one by Rudrayya Mathad 1918 and another by T. Shamanna in 1920. But they were not published. A well-known writer Shivaram Karant prepared Sirigannaḍa Arthakōṣa in 1940, Gurunath Joshi and Ashvathanarayana published Kannaḍa Kannaḍa Śabdakōṣa in 1956. C.E. Kavali published Sacitra Kannaḍa Kannaḍa Kastūri Kōṣa in 1957; S. R. Ramarao brought out Kannada Kannaḍa English Dictionary in 1965.

Kannada Sahitya Parishat's Kannada dictionary

A culminating massive dictionary Kannada Sāhitya Pariṣattina Nigḥaṃtu by Kannada Sahitya Parishat, was published by the Sahitya Parishat in 8 volumes. The first volume was brought out in 1970 and the 8th volume was brought out in 1995. This dictionary and the DED/DEDR are very careful in combining a number of homophones into a semantic group.

In the present dictionary we have followed the above mentioned two dictionaries in arranging the homophonous forms, but in some rare cases two etymons in the above mentioned dictionaries are combined into one entry, to explain the semantic relations. If there are any mistakes in the judgement, we beg pardon from the readers.

Kannada English Dictionary

The characteristic feature of the present dictionary is that it does not propose the reconstructed form in proto-Dravidian. But this dictionary has included Kannada material from Kittel's dictionary as it is. Therefore, the reconstructed forms from the DED/DEDR have crept in into this dictionary, without “ * ” mark. We checked whether the word appears in Kannada Sahitya Parishat's Kannada dictionary. If the word was not found, then, we have marked the entry with a “ ? ” mark.

As already mentioned, we have not collected the data from the source material, but we have selected most of the entries from already printed dictionaries. While collecting the data we have kept the view that the intended dictionary should be able to help the learners of Kannada, students of linguistics and research scholars who may undertake research on Kannada and other Dravidian languages. In this process we owe especially to the Kannada Parishat's dictionary for the data.

All the meanings of a word and all its usages given in the Parishat's Dictionary, were not found to be relevant for our purpose. Hence a serious limitation was laid down on the data keeping the utilitarian value of our dictionary. Our effort in this dictionary is to provide the readers with additional information such as transliteration of Kannada words, pronunciation of the words in IPA, and the example to illustrate the usage of the head word in Kannada language.

The Arrangement of the Dictionary

The arrangement of the present dictionary is as follows:

1. The head word is given in Kannada script.
2. The Kannada alphabetical order is followed in the arrangement of the head-words. The alphabetical order of the Kannada letters is given for reference in Appendix I below.
3. The alternative spellings, if there are any, of the head word, are given, after its pronunciation.
4. If there are more words with the same spelling, they are indicated with superscript: like ¹, ², etc. at the head entry.

5. The words derived from the head word, are included below it, as sub-head word, in slightly smaller fonts. If they are more than one, they are appropriately included, one after the other. In this sense this dictionary is an etymological dictionary.
6. The origin of the word, whether from Sanskrit or Arabic etc. is also indicated at the end of the entry.
7. The head word is followed by its transliteration in Roman script with appropriate diacritic marks to help the users who do not know the Kannada script. This shall also give an additional information to the researchers about how the word is transliterated.
8. The transliteration is followed by the transcription of the head word in IPA, to indicate its pronunciation. It would be necessary that the users are acquainted with the International Phonetic Alphabet (IPA 2005), and the pronunciation of each symbol in that chart. There are many tools and programmes to know and master the pronunciation of the IPA symbols.
9. The grammatical function of the head word, such as n. for noun, adj. for adjective, etc. is indicated after the pronunciation. The complete list of the grammatical categories is given below.
10. The semantic classification of the head word is indicated as in special brackets: $\llbracket \]$, as for example, $\llbracket \text{number} \rrbracket$, $\llbracket \text{mus} \rrbracket$ etc. after the grammatical category. If a particular head word is appearing with different semantic classifications, they are appropriately indicated with serial numbers. The complete list of items of semantic classification is given in the following pages.
11. The meaning(s) in English follow. The related meanings are separated by commas, and the different meanings are serially numbered as 1. 2. etc. The etymological meaning, if relevant, is numbered as 0 before all the other meaning(s).
12. The source reference of the other dictionaries like Kittel's Kannada English Dictionary is given, as [Ka.]. The etymology of the word is indicated and the reference number of the DEDR is also given as for example, [Ka. D340]. The number here refers to the item number in the DEDR. Similarly, Ta. refers to Tamil section of DEDR, Ma.refers to Malayalam section. The abbreviations of languages are given in the further section. In case further information is found necessary, reference of the Kannada Sahitya Parishat's dictionary or other dictionaries is also given.
13. Wherever it is felt that the meaning is not fully conveyed, the illustrations of Kannada sentences, with their translation in English are provided to help the users to understand the usage and the semantic context of that word in a sentence.
14. The etymology of the most of the loanwords from Sanskrit is indicated as [Sk.]. If the readers are interested in the original Sanskrit form they can refer to a dictionary of the Sanskrit language. Whenever further information is necessary a reference number of A Concise Etymological Sanskrit Dictionary by Mayrhofer Kurzgefasstes, and Comparative Dictionary of Indo-Aryan Languages (CDIAL) by Ralph Turner are given.

15. We have not included the illustration of botanical or zoological terms. When the illustrations are already available in other books, we have given the names of the books (and the page number) there.
16. When we collected the source material from other dictionaries we write, for example, Nn. 51 (Kitt). This means that this is from nānārtharatnākara quoted by Kittel in his Kannada dictionary.
17. When the Kannada Sahitya Parishat Dictionary is the source, the reference number has not been given. The readers may open that dictionary and find the reference.
18. Old Kannada words appearing in the DED/DEDR are all entered in this dictionary as entries. Therefore, if a word cannot be found in this dictionary it cannot be found in DED/DEDR either.
19. There are various styles of speech and writing of Kannada. For instance, formal style, informal style, homely style, literary style, etc. Dictionaries prepared so far contain the words taken from all these styles. Every word in the dictionary has its own sphere of usage. Some words are used in old literature and some are not used now-a-days. Some words are prohibited to write or speak, except between intimate friends or relatives. It is difficult for foreign users to select the appropriate vocabulary according to the context. We have made an effort to guide the readers to make a selection of words for usage.

The Status Marks at the Head Word

Every word is marked with its semantic status. They are as follows:

- (a) Words that are used both in written and spoken languages and both in formal and informal speech are not marked at the head entry, but if one of its meanings has a special occurrence, then it is appropriately marked. Therefore, the entries without any status mark can be used in any context. For example, akki (ಅಕ್ಕಿ) meaning 'rice' or nīru (ನೀರು) meaning 'water', etc. have no status mark and thus they can be used in any context.
- (b) Words which are obsolete and cannot be used now, are marked with a black bullet: ●
- (c) Words which are used only in literature and formal language are marked with a circle: ○
- (d) Words which occur only in regional languages are marked by an obelisk: †
- (e) Words which occur only in highly literary texts are marked by a double obelisk: ††
- (f) Words which are deviant in spelling from the standard form are marked with a spade symbol: ♠
- (g) Uncommon words or words with an uncommon spelling are marked with a diamond symbol: ◇

- (h) Cross reference to the head word is indicated by pointing hand symbol:  and sometimes with a double line arrow, \Rightarrow
- (i) Sufficient care has been taken to be exact in indicating the pronunciation. Due to regionalisms and other factors, some doubtful cases have remained. Such cases are marked with “?”, a question mark.
- (j) We have checked whether a particular word appears in Kannada Sahitya Parishat’s Kannada dictionary. If the word was not found, we have marked the entry with a “ ? ” mark. The meaning of the “?” mark can be understood in the context.
- (k) The colloquial and non-standard usages are marked with an asterisk: *.
- (l) If a head word occurs with different grammatical functions, they are appropriately indicated by encircled serial numbers: ①, ②, etc.
- (m) Word which has come from another one is indicated by a backward arrow: \leftarrow .
- (n) Word which has generated another one is indicated by a forward arrow: \rightarrow .
- (o) A word with opposite meaning of the head word is indicated with the symbol \leftrightarrow . For example, anḡaṇa “front-yard” \leftrightarrow hittala “back-yard”.
- (p) Optional words in the meaning are enclosed in $\langle \rangle$ brackets.
- (q) Derivatives are enclosed in $\langle \rangle$ brackets.
- (r) Special usages of the word, like figurative usage etc. are enclosed in special type of hexagonal brackets: $\{ \}$ For example, $\{fig.\}$

Abbreviations of Linguistic, Grammatical and Geographical Terms

We have adopted the abbreviations in Roman script used by Kittel. Thus the abbreviations are common between this dictionary and the Kittel’s dictionary. If the source materials do not appear in Kittel’s Dictionary, we have adopted the abbreviations from Kannaḡa Sāhitya Pariṣat Nighaṇṭu (abbreviated as KPN) because this has the largest list of abbreviations. If the source materials did not appear in the above two books we opted for a new abbreviation or we did not use any abbreviation at all.

The parts of speech are indicated in abbreviation, in italic letters, after the pronunciation of the head-word. The list of abbreviations and their expansions are as follows:

Parts of speech

acc.	Accusative	(adj.)	Optionally used as an ad-
adj.	Adjective		jective
		adv.	Adverb

col.	Colloquial	numr.	Number & Numeral adjective
conj.	Conjunction	obl.	Oblic form
dat.	Dative	onom.	Onomatopoeia
denm.	Denominative	p.part.	Past participle
dig.	Dignified usage	pej.	Pejorative
echo.	Echo word	part.	Particle (The words that have no inflexion or derivation)
f.	Feminine nouns	postp.	Postposition
fig.	Figurative	pref.	Prefix
gen.	Genitive	pron.	Pronoun
ibc.	in the beginning of compound	snt.	Interjection, Sound in imitation, or quotation from Sanskrit
ifc.	in the final of compound	subj.	Subjunctive mood
imp.	Imperative	suf.	Suffix
ins.	Instrumental	v.	Verb
intrj.	Interjection	v.adj.	Adjective functioning as verb
m.	Masculine nouns	v.adv.	Adverb functioning as verb
mf.	Masculine and feminine nouns	v.aux.	Auxiliary verb
mim.	Mimesis	vi.	Intransitive verb
mn.	Masculine and neuter nouns	vt.	Transitive verb
n.	Noun, proper name
(n.)	Quasi-noun

It may be noted that we have added a grammatical category, “quasi-noun” with the abbreviation, (n.), because the agglutinative languages like the Dravidian languages, Japanese, Korean, Mongolian, Manchu, Turk languages have words with meaning or meanings but the grammatical categories are denoted by the independent words following them. In Kannada, the nouns which are used both as a noun and as an adjective are indicated with (n.). Similarly the words which are optionally used as adjectives are indicated with the abbreviation: (adj.).

Abbreviations of Source Text, Languages and Dialects of Kannada

Most of the abbreviations of the source material are adopted from Kittel’s Kannada English Dictionary, 1893, and its revised edition, 1968. Some of them are newly created for the purpose of the present dictionary.

¶ marks the beginning of example in Kannada in Kannada script.

[Ø] mark, at the end of an entry, indicates that (1) the particular entry is a rarely used suffix, or (2) the entry word no more exists in the language, or (3) it is an interjection, or (4) an alphabet rarely used initially in the language.

A[0-9]+ “A” which is followed directly by number (A12 etc.) refers to Appendix of DEDR.

Notes on Pronunciation

The pronunciation of the head word is indicated after the transliteration, in square or phonetic brackets, in the International Phonetic Alphabet (IPA) symbols. Those who intend to know how a particular word is pronounced, are expected to be familiar with the IPA and the pronunciation of the symbols therein.

However, a few notes are found to be necessary regarding pronunciation:

1. ṣa (ṣ) [ṣə], a retroflex voiceless fricative, is pronounced as it is described in the Sanskrit grammars by those who are acquainted with Sanskrit grammar. But the majority of the people pronounce it as an alveo-palatal fricative, [ç]. Its pronunciation as [s] or [ʃ] is regarded as irregular.
2. The pronunciation of the word final -u changes depending upon the situation. In some conditions, it is not pronounced at all. The pronunciation of the words containing it given in this dictionary, occurs only when it is pronounced in slow and careful articulation.
3. The pronunciation of [e:] before [g] and [k], is often [ɛ:] or [æ] in colloquial Kannada. e.g. [e:ke] and [he:ge] are pronounced as [ɛ:ke] and [hæge].
4. The front vowels, [i], [i:], [e] and [e:] are pronounced with an on-glide of [ʲ]. e.g. [idu] is pronounced as [ʲidu] and [ede] is pronounced as [ʲede] etc.
5. When the front vowels, [i], [i:], [e] and [e:] are followed by retroflex consonants like, /ṭ, ḍ, ṇ, ḷ, ṙ / they are sometimes pronounced as centralised varieties: [i, i:, ə, ə:] respectively.
6. Word initial [o] and [o:] are pronounced with an on-glide of [ʲ] as for example, [ondu] is pronounced as [ʲondu] and [o:ṭa] as [ʲo:ṭa] etc.
7. [z] and [f] occur in loan words from other languages. e.g. [zaru:r] and [kāfi].
8. When more pronunciations than one are given, the first one represents the formal pronunciation and the later ones represent the informal ones. e.g. [he:ge],[hɛ:ge],[hæ:ge].
9. Fricatived pronunciations are marked with a small circle below the consonants [ḃ], [ḡ] and [ḍ]. These are different from the fricatives.

10. Ideally, the visarga (ḥ), transliterated as h, is pronounced as a voiceless velar fricative [x] before velar sounds and as a voiceless bilabial fricative [ɸ] before bilabials. But usually it is pronounced as the geminated following consonant: e.g. antaḥkaraṇa is pronounced as antakkaraṇa and antaḥpura is pronounced as antappura. This way of pronunciation is also indicated in the dictionary.
11. Vowels of shorter duration are marked with a superscript [˘] on the concerned vowel. E.g. in [nivəsṓnə], [ə] after [s] is of shorter duration.

Arkavottu and halant

The consonant r as the first element of a consonant cluster takes a special form called arkavottu ಠ, corresponding the repha form of Devanagari: eg. ತರ್ಕ for tarka.

The halant sign which marks the consonant character terminating without any vowel is ˆ: eg. k = ಕ̣, t = ತ̣, etc.

Acknowledgments

The authors would like to express their thanks to the following institutions and persons who helped in many ways.

The present dictionary is an outcome of the trilingual dictionary project “Kannada English Japanese Dictionary” which was worked out by B.B. Rajapurohit and N. Učida over a period of more than two decades. Of course, not continuously, but with suitable time schedule convenient for both of them. In this process, the credit must go to the Research Institute for Languages and Cultures of Asia and Africa (ILCAA) of the Tokyo University of Foreign Studies, Tokyo, for inviting B.B. Rajapurohit to the ILCAA, as a Visiting Research Professor for two terms of one year each (1991-92 and 1994-95). During this period, the data collected for the dictionary was organised and the required Kannada fonts were designed. The ILCAA also provided funds for N. Učida to go over to Tokyo for working on the dictionary and also to come to India to continue the work with B.B. Rajapurohit. Jun Takashima extended all technical help in designing the format of the dictionary and putting the data into it. Another outcome of the original trilingual dictionary is “Kannada Japanese Dictionary”, which is planned for publication separately.

During the entire activity, many people have rendered help and support. The authors would like to record their heartfelt thanks to all of them, particularly to, T. Nara, who gave his moral support and guidance; Two research organizations, namely, GICAS (Grammatological Informatics based on Corpora of Asian Scripts) and IRC (Information Resources Center) of ILCAA, who gave support to our dictionary-making; K. Machida, who permitted us to use his full-text search and input method tools and rendered help; S. Raghavendra Bhat, who read the drafts and gave many useful suggestions; K.B. Sadananda who gave expert opinion on botanical and zoological terms; Rajanna who rendered help in many ways; Raghupathi Bhat and Vidya Bhat for drawing the pictures in new style.
