I am pleased to present the Australian Electoral Commission's combined report and statistics for the 1997 election of delegates to the Constitutional Convention.

This historic election presented many challenges to AEC staff. We drew on our wide experience in conducting federal and union elections to develop procedures to conduct Australia's largest voluntary postal ballot.

This publication tells the story of the Constitutional Convention election from the AEC's perspective. The first part, the report, is a chronology of how the AEC developed the various procedures and systems to conduct a poll which was quite different to the sort of election with which most Australians are familiar.

The second part of this volume provides the official results of the election in various statistical tables. While the names of the elected delegates were publicly announced in each capital city at declaration ceremonies before Christmas, it is important that we provide comprehensive details of how we arrived at those results. That information is provided in a summary format in this volume and in more detail electronically on the attached CD ROM.

This report is just one of the many Australian Electoral Commission publications designed to increase awareness in the community about Australia's democratic systems. If you would like further information about AEC publications, please phone our national enquiry service on 13 23 26. Alternatively, you may care to visit our home page at www.aec.gov.au to find out more about the functions and services of the AEC.

I hope you find this combined report and statistics useful and informative.

Introduction

THE ROLE OF THE AUSTRALIAN ELECTORAL COMMISSION

The Australian Electoral Commission (AEC) is responsible for the administration of federal elections and referendums. This includes:

- maintaining and updating Commonwealth electoral rolls

- conducting federal parliamentary elections, redistributions, referendums and industrial and other elections as required

- enforcing compulsory enrolment and compulsory voting

- conducting electoral education and promoting public awareness of electoral matters

- providing information and advice on electoral matters to parliament, the government and government departments and authorities

- electoral research

- assisting in the conduct of certain approved foreign elections and referendums.

THE STRUCTURE OF THE AUSTRALIAN ELECTORAL COMMISSION

The AEC is organised on a geographic basis with the Central Office in Canberra, a Head Office in each State and the Northern Territory, and a Divisional Office in or near each of the 148 electoral divisions.

The AEC is headed by a Commission comprising of a Chairperson (who must be a judge or a retired judge of the Federal Court), the Electoral Commissioner (who performs the functions of the Chief Executive Officer) and a part-time non-judicial member (usually the Australian Statistician). In addition, the Deputy Electoral Commissioner assists the Electoral Commissioner.

In each State and the Northern Territory, the Australian Electoral Officer (AEO) is responsible for the management of electoral activities within their State or Territory. An AEO for the Australian Capital Territory is temporarily appointed for each election period. The administration of the Constitutional Convention election in each State and Territory was under the control of the AEO for that State or Territory, who was also the returning officer.

Each electoral division has a permanent Divisional Returning Officer (DRO) who is responsible for electoral administration in their division.

The AEC administers the following Acts:

- Commonwealth Electoral Act 1918

- Representation Act 1983

- Referendum (Machinery Provisions) Act 1984

The AEC also has specific functions under the Constitution and the following Acts:

- Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Commission Act 1989

- Industrial Relations Act 1988

- Workplace Relations Act 1996

The Constitutional Convention election was conducted by the AEC under the Constitutional Convention (Election) Act 1997.

Constitutional Convention Election

DEVELOPMENT OF POLICY AND PROCEDURES

During the election campaign for the 1996 Federal Election, Mr John Howard MP, the then Liberal Opposition Leader, confirmed that if he won government a Constitutional Convention would be held on the republic issue to which the delegates would be elected.

In the months following the Liberal-National Coalition election win, the AEC participated in preliminary discussions on the broad options and costs of conducting an election for delegates to a Constitutional Convention. In August 1996 the AEC met with the Department of Prime Minister and Cabinet to discuss several options on how to conduct this election. Some of the options that were considered were voting by post, voting by machine readable ballot, using 'marks' rather than numbers on the ballot paper and the need for a preliminary scrutiny to verify voter eligibility. Based on this meeting the AEC prepared a discussion paper proposing a package of options.

In January 1997 further discussion took place to finalise a package for the election with the AEC providing technical advice. On 4 February 1997, the Prime Minister Hon. John Howard MP announced that the Constitutional Convention election (CCE) would proceed as a non-compulsory postal ballot for half the 152 convention delegates.

Following this announcement the AEC continued to finalise the policy and procedures required to conduct the election. The voting system for the CCE was developed from the Senate-style system but with several significant variations. These variations were necessary as, depending on the number of candidates in a State or Territory, using the Senate system could have resulted in a ballot paper close to one metre square and the scrutiny process taking up to two months to complete.

PASSAGE OF THE LEGISLATION

Drafting of the election legislation commenced as soon as most of the policy issues had been determined and was finalised under a very tight timeframe. To meet the Federal Government's initial timeframe of holding the Constitutional Convention in December 1997, the election legislation was required to be introduced into Parliament by 26 March 1997 to enable it to be passed by the end of June 1997.

The Bill for conducting a voluntary postal election was introduced into the House of Representatives on 26 March 1997 and was passed by that House on 15 May 1997 after Opposition amendments were defeated and 15 Government amendments were agreed to. The Bill was then introduced into the Senate on 26 May 1997 where it was significantly amended to provide for a compulsory attendance ballot using the Senate system of voting. The amended Bill was returned to the House of Representatives where on 23 June 1997 the members of the House refused to accept the Senate amendments. On 24 June 1997 the Senate insisted upon its amendments for the Bill.

As the House of Representatives and the Senate could not agree on the way the election should be conducted and as it was the end of the winter sitting period for Parliament, further debate on the Bill was held over until the resumption of Parliament in August 1997.

On 25 August 1997 debate on the Bill was resumed in the House of Representatives which again refused to accept the Senate's amendments. The Bill was then returned to the Senate which then no longer insisted on its amendments that the election be a compulsory attendance ballot. The Bill was passed by the Senate following a further 15 Government amendments including the amendment for a minimum of nine preference boxes to be below the line on the ballot paper for those States and Territories which were electing less than nine delegates.

The amended Bill was finally passed by the Parliament on 28 August 1997 and the Constitutional Convention (Election) Act 1997 received Royal Assent on 22 September 1997. With the delayed passage of the legislation, the holding of the Constitutional Convention was postponed from December 1997 to the first two weeks of February 1998.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

The Constitutional Convention was held at Old Parliament House in Canberra from 2 to 13 February 1998. The Convention discussed issues related to three broad questions about whether or not Australia should become a republic. The three questions identified for discussion by the Prime Minister were:

1   whether Australia should become a republic;

2   which republic model should be put to the electorate to consider against the status quo; and

3   in what time frame and under what circumstances might any change be considered.

In addition to the 76 elected delegates, a further 76 delegates to the Constitutional Convention were appointed by the Federal Government. Of these appointed delegates, 40 were parliamentary delegates from Federal, State and Territory Parliaments. The remaining 36 were non-parliamentary delegates appointed with the aim of achieving adequate representation from Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islanders, local government, young people and women.

The Federal Government appointed the Rt Hon. Ian Sinclair as the Chairman of the Constitutional Convention and the Hon. Barry Jones as the Deputy Chairman.

The Constitutional Convention was organised by the Department of Prime Minister and Cabinet.   During the election, the Department of Prime Minister and Cabinet prepared a four page publication titled Republic Yes or No which was distributed as a liftout in major newspapers. The publication provided background information on the existing federal system and the options for a republic.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION ELECTION AT A GLANCE

The CCE was the largest national postal ballot ever conducted in Australia and was a different sort of election for both the AEC and Australia. The AEC had previously conducted industrial and local government elections as postal ballots but had never undertaken anything on the scale of the CCE before. The logistics of conducting an election that was unique in Australia required the AEC to direct its skills and resources in new and innovative ways. Following are some of the highlights of the CCE.

- It was the biggest single mailout in Australia. Approximately 18 million CCE items were handled by Australia Post (almost 12 million ballot paper envelopes were sent out to electors and approximately 6 million completed ballot paper envelopes were returned to the AEC).

- It was a voluntary election. Electors who were on the electoral roll at the close of rolls were able to choose whether or not to vote in the election.

- Being a postal ballot, a whole suite of new voting materials were designed for the election including the candidate statement information booklet, the ballot paper, voting ticket booklets and ballot paper envelopes.

- The ballot paper envelope was created especially for this election so that the front declaration flap could be removed without opening the envelope. This ensured it was a secret ballot.

- This election was the first time that voting ticket booklets were produced. In previous elections voting ticket posters have been displayed at polling places.

- A complex overflow system was set up for the national telephone enquiry service. This minimised the number of callers who were put into a queue or got an engaged signal.

- The national telephone enquiry service operated on every weekend for the first time during an election period. The Melbourne and Canberra centres were open every weekend and answered calls from throughout Australia. A total of 227 763 enquiries on this number were handled during the election period.

- The information available for electors from non-English speaking backgrounds was enhanced for this election with 15 dedicated language lines available on the interpreting telephone service. A total of 10 102 calls were handled by this service throughout the election period.

- A community awareness campaign was undertaken among non-English speaking background communities. Information was direct mailed to community groups, organisations, individuals and the ethnic media.

- Ballot papers were personally delivered to thousands of electors living in 180 remote communities in the Northern Territory. This program was developed because the communities did not have regular postal services.

- Bar code scanners were used by Divisional Offices for the preliminary scrutiny. This was the first time bar code technology had been utilised by the AEC and a training package for all staff was developed.

- A computerised scrutiny system was used for the first time by the AEC in a national election. All formal votes cast were entered into a computer which then calculated the quota and the transfer and distribution of preferences.

Enrolment

TWO YOUNG WA VOTERS UPDATING THEIR ENROLMENT BEFORE THE CLOSE OF ROLLS

WHO COULD VOTE?

A person was eligible to vote in the CCE if their name was on the list of electors which was taken from the Commonwealth Electoral Roll at the close of rolls for the election at 8pm, 7 October 1997.

The electoral roll is a list of all people who are registered to vote at Australian elections. Australian citizens aged 18 years and over (with a few exceptions) must enrol to vote and voting is compulsory in federal elections and referendums for enrolled electors. Voting was not compulsory at the CCE.

Seventeen year olds can provisionally enrol and can vote if their 18th birthday falls on or before the close of polls for the election. The only non-Australian citizens who are eligible to vote are British subjects who were on the Commonwealth Electoral Roll immediately before 26 January 1984, at which time the eligibility requirements were altered.

The following people are not entitled to enrol and vote:

- people who are incapable of understanding the nature and significance of enrolment and voting

- prisoners serving a sentence of five years or more
- people who have been convicted of treason and not pardoned.

CLOSE OF ROLLS

There were 11 989 682 people enrolled to vote at the close of rolls for the CCE at 8pm, 7 October 1997. This figure included 6 454 provisional electors who turned 18 between the close of rolls and the close of polling. The close of rolls figure was calculated following the processing of all enrolment cards received by 8pm on 7 October 1997.

LIST OF ELECTORS

After the close of rolls, a data file of the list of electors was created. This data file which detailed the name and address of each elector was securely couriered to mailing houses in Western Australia and Queensland. The mailing house in Queensland used the data to produce a personal envelope label for each elector in New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, Tasmania and the Australian Capital Territory. The mailing house in Western Australia used the data in a different way by spraying or 'ink jetting' the details of every elector in Western Australia, South Australia and the Northern Territory directly onto the envelope.

A CD-ROM of the list of electors for each electoral division was also created and was distributed to Divisional Offices. This was used by each office at the preliminary scrutiny to check the details of electors on the returned ballot paper envelopes against the details on the CD-ROM.

Nominations

WHO COULD NOMINATE AS A CANDIDATE?

A person could not be elected unless they had nominated as a candidate by the close of nominations at 12 noon on 8 October 1997. To be eligible to nominate as a candidate in a State or Territory a person had to be at least 18 years old, an Australian citizen, and entitled to vote in the election in that State or Territory.

A person could not nominate if, at the close of nominations, they did not meet any of the three eligibility requirements detailed above, were a member of Federal Parliament, State Parliament or a Territory Legislative Assembly, or were an appointed delegate.

It was not possible to nominate until the Minister issued the official notice of the election (29 September 1997) and a person was only able to nominate for election as a delegate for one State or Territory. Nominations were made to the Australian Electoral Officer (AEO) for the State or Territory.

Each candidate was required to pay a non-refundable nomination fee of $500 and if nominating as part of a group the non-refundable fee was $500 for each candidate in the group.

GROUPED AND UNGROUPED CANDIDATES

Candidates were able to nominate in the election as either a member of a group or as an ungrouped candidate. On the ballot paper all the ungrouped candidates were listed but only the first member of the group had their name printed under the group name. This was necessary to ensure that the ballot paper was kept to a reasonable size.

CANDIDATE INFORMATION BRIEFINGS

The AEO in each State and Territory held an information briefing for people interested in standing for election as a delegate to the Constitution Convention. The briefings were held in the weeks leading up to the close of nominations. The briefings informed people about how, where and when to nominate and explained the responsibilities of candidates.

The AEC advertised the information briefings in major newspapers.

DECLARATION OF NOMINATIONS

The details of nominations were released at the public declaration held by the AEO in each State and Territory at 12 noon on 9 October 1997. Nationally, 609 people nominated as candidates in the CCE. This figure included 433 candidates in 80 groups and 176 ungrouped candidates. There were 426 male candidates and 179 female candidates, in addition to four candidates who chose not to specify their gender on the nomination form. The number of candidates by State and Territory, by gender and by groups and ungrouped is outlined on page 60 and 61 of the statistical section.

NOMINATIONS SYSTEM

Nominations were entered into a computerised nominations system at State and Territory Head Offices. The system produced a number of reports which were provided to the media, candidates and other interested people. A national list of nominations was available soon after the last declaration of nominations held in Perth. This list was also placed on the AEC's home page.

DRAW FOR BALLOT PAPER POSITIONS

The order in which candidates' names appeared on the ballot paper was determined by a random draw. The draw was conducted by the AEO in each State and Territory immediately following the public declaration of nominations and was open to the public, the media and candidates.

There were two major draws in the process, each with two steps. The first draw was to determine the order of groups and the second draw was for the order of ungrouped candidates, as groups appeared before ungrouped candidates on the ballot paper. The first step, in the first draw, allocated a number to each group and the second step determined the order in which the groups appeared on the ballot paper. The same process was followed to determine the order of ungrouped candidates. This process is called a double randomised draw.

CANDIDATE STATEMENTS

All candidates were able to submit a brief statement containing information about their group or themselves. Ungrouped candidates had up to 50 words each and groups had 50 words plus 25 words for each member and this could be used as a total.

Statements had to be submitted to the AEO within 24 hours after the close of nominations and candidates had until 72 hours after the close of nominations to alter their statements.

The candidate statements were contained in the information booklet called Your Guide to the Constitutional Convention Election which was sent to each elector in their voting package. The statements were also made available on the AEC's internet home page.

CANDIDATE IDENTIFICATION NUMBERS

All candidates were given a unique identification number by a computerised random number generation method, which was conducted following the draw for ballot paper positions. Numbers given to candidates started at 100 so that no candidate received number '1'. The numbers were for use by electors who chose to vote below the line on the ballot paper. The candidate identification numbers were also listed in the information booklet called Your Guide to the Constitutional Convention Election.

VOTING TICKETS

Within 48 hours after the close of nominations all candidates were able to lodge a voting ticket with the AEC. A voting ticket is a written list setting out the preference ordering of all candidates in the election. At federal elections, the voting tickets have been made into posters which were displayed at polling places. For the CCE, the voting tickets were compiled into State and Territory specific booklets. Copies of voting ticket booklets were available for inspection at AEC offices and were sent out to electors on request.

In the CCE the majority of candidates lodged a voting ticket with the AEC. Nationally, 74 groups and 133 ungrouped candidates submitted a voting ticket while 6 groups and 43 ungrouped candidates did not.

Voting Materials

The voting package developed for the CCE contained a ballot paper, an information booklet called Your Guide to the Constitutional Convention Election, a ballot paper envelope and a reply paid envelope which were all inserted into an outer envelope. Separate voting packages were produced for each State and Territory.

TENDER PROCESS

Once the AEC had determined the type of voting materials required, an open tender process was conducted in early 1997 to select the companies that would produce the materials. A number of companies in Australia expressed interest in the production job and an information briefing was held in Canberra. The AEC engaged several different companies in various locations around Australia to produce the election materials and services required. The production of the materials was split among several companies due to its sheer magnitude and to ensure the materials were produced in the most efficient and cost effective way available.

PRODUCTION OF VOTING MATERIALS

The production and delivery of CCE voting materials was a substantial logistical exercise that involved the AEC, Australia Post and a number of companies around Australia working to produce, assemble and mail out large quantities of materials within extremely tight deadlines. There were several challenges that were successfully managed during the production process including:

The final size of the voting package: It was most cost effective to keep the size of the voting package to standard 'Australia Post' mailing size. The final size of the package however largely depended on the number of candidates who nominated in a particular State or Territory. While the voting packages in every State and Territory were kept within the standard mailing size, the AEC had contingencies in place to cater for a larger size package.

SOME OF THE MATERIALS PRODUCED FOR THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION ELECTION PRIOR TO DISTRIBUTION

The coordination of the production: The production and assembly of the materials was a major scheduling exercise. The challenge was to ensure that a balanced supply of all voting materials reached the mailhouse companies on time to be compiled into the voting package. Sometimes certain materials were produced in one State and then sent by road to another State to be inserted into the package.

The time restrictions: From the beginning it was clear that the production of the voting materials had to be completed within extremely tight timeframes. In all there was a window of 32 days in which to print, fold, personalise and assemble the materials into the voting package.

Quality assurance and security procedures: The AEC worked closely with all the companies to implement effective quality assurance measures. AEC staff checked the materials regularly throughout the production process and strict measures were followed to ensure the materials were secure during production, transit and storage.

THE VOTING MATERIALS

Envelopes

A total of 45 million envelopes was produced for this election - 15 million each of the ballot paper envelope, reply paid envelope and outer envelope. The production of the reply paid and outer envelopes was split between companies in Melbourne and Perth and used over 160 tonne of paper. The outer and reply paid envelopes took almost four weeks to produce and were the first voting materials completed.

A company in Brisbane designed and produced the ballot paper envelopes. After extensive consultation on the design of the envelope it took almost six weeks to produce the 15 million ballot paper envelopes, using over 90 tonne of paper. Two companies in various sites around Australia undertook the task of personalising the ballot paper envelopes for all electors.

Your Guide to the Constitutional Convention Election information booklet

A total of 15 million State and Territory specific information booklets was printed by two companies at locations in Sydney, Melbourne and Perth. The production of the information booklets commenced after the declaration of nominations on 9 October and was completed by 28 October. Approximately 250 tonne of paper was required to produce the booklets.

Ballot paper

Production of the ballot papers for each State and Territory commenced following the draw for ballot paper positions. A total of 15 million ballot papers was printed by two companies at their sites in Sydney, Melbourne, Brisbane and Perth.

Compilation of the voting package

The assembling of the voting packages commenced on 17 October and was completed by 7 November. Almost 12 million individually-addressed packages were compiled, one for every elector who was on the list of electors at the close of rolls. The CCE voting packages were assembled in locations in Sydney, Brisbane, Melbourne and Perth.

MAILOUT OF VOTING MATERIALS

Over a period of two weeks, 11.9 million CCE voting packages were mailed or delivered to electors. The first major instalment of CCE voting packages was lodged with various Australia Post offices on 28 October 1997. The last of the 11.9 million completed CCE voting packages were lodged on 11 November 1997 for delivery.

The delivery of voting packages to electors living in remote and isolated communities had commenced slightly earlier in October as a longer time was required to deliver and receive material back from these areas.

The combined experience of the AEC and Australia Post resulted in the secure and efficient delivery of voting packages and the return of completed ballot papers to the AEC. The return of completed ballot papers was made more efficient with metropolitan AEC Divisional Offices and some selected regional offices being allocated special postcodes.

REPLACEMENT VOTING MATERIALS

Any eligible elector who did not receive their voting package or had lost or spoilt their ballot paper was able to request a replacement voting package be sent to the address of their choice. A total of 49 138 replacement voting packages were issued by the AEC.

Replacement material was sent to electors through the mail until 6pm, 4 December 1997 however electors were able to pick up replacement material at any AEC office right up until the close of polling. The majority of replacements were requested through the national telephone enquiry service by electors who had not updated their enrolment address before the close of rolls.

Pages 67 through 75 of the statistical section detail the number of CCE voting materials posted and returned including the number of replacement packs.

To vote above the line an elector simply placed the number '1' in one box only. Each box above the line represented either a group or an ungrouped candidate. If a voter chose to vote above the line, the preferences were distributed according to the group or ungrouped candidate's voting ticket lodged with the AEC.

In the CCE 85.4 per cent of electors chose to vote above the line. At the 1996 Federal Election 94.4 per cent of electors voted above the line. The table on page 113 of the statistical section provides a breakdown of above and below the line voting in the CCE by State and Territory.

Below the line voting

To vote below the line, electors placed the candidate identification number of their first choice candidate in the preference box marked '1st preference', the number of their second choice candidate in the preference box marked '2 preference' and so on. A voter had to complete at least one of these preference boxes and could then fill in as few or as many of the remaining boxes below the line. The ballot paper was counted for as many boxes as had been completed.

For most States, the number of preference boxes below the line corresponded with the number of delegates to be elected in that State. For those States and Territories that elected less than nine delegates (SA, TAS, NT and ACT) a minimum of nine preference boxes were below the line.

Once an elector had completed their ballot paper they:

- sealed it in the blue ballot paper envelope

- signed the voter declaration and wrote their date of birth on the ballot paper envelope

- placed the sealed ballot paper envelope in the white reply-paid envelope addressed to the AEC

- posted or delivered the white envelope so that it arrived at the AEC before the close of polling.

Only if all of these four steps above were completed was the ballot paper admitted into the counting of the votes.

FORMAL AND INFORMAL VOTES

Ballot papers correctly marked according to the rules for voting are called formal votes and only formal votes contribute to determining the result of an election. Ballot papers that do not satisfy these rules are regarded as informal or invalid and after their total has been tallied they are then excluded from any further counting. The CCE ballot paper was developed especially for the election and the formality rules for below the line differ from those of a Senate ballot paper.

A ballot paper was informal if:

- the voter could be identified

- the voter's intention was not clear

- the ballot paper was blank

- it did not have the official mark, (unless the officer conducting the scrutiny was satisfied that it was authentic)

- was marked either above or below the line and was invalid

- was marked both above and below the line and both were invalid

If marked above the line the ballot paper was formal if:

- it had a preference mark in one and only one box above the line.

If marked below the line the ballot paper was formal if at least one of the preference boxes satisfied all of the following:

- it had a candidate number in it

- there was no other candidate number in it

- the candidate number was not in any other box

- none of the boxes standing higher in order had two of more candidate numbers in it

- none of the boxes standing higher had a candidate number which had been marked in two or more boxes.

If a ballot paper was marked both above and below the line and both were formal the above the line vote was counted. In the CCE fewer than 2.2 per cent of votes were informal. At the 1996 Federal Election, informal voting in the House of Representatives and the Senate was 3.5 per cent and 3.2 per cent respectively. The national summary of formal and informal voting in the CCE is presented on page 76 of the statistical section and the State and Territory and divisional breakdowns are on pages 77 through 80.

INTEGRITY OF THE VOTING SYSTEM

As a postal ballot, the AEC introduced a number of measures to ensure the privacy and security of each elector's vote. These measures were also to detect any attempted multiple voting or attempts to vote in the name of another elector.

Identity check measures
To ensure the identity of a voter, each ballot paper envelope was pre-printed with the elector's name and address and a unique bar code which represented the elector's enrolment number. At the preliminary scrutiny the bar code was scanned to check the elector's details. As a double check of identity, electors were required to sign and write their date of birth on the declaration flap on the ballot paper envelope.

Multiple voting check measures
Voters signed a declaration on the ballot paper envelope that they had only voted once in the election. The process of scanning the elector's unique bar code as the envelopes were received detected any duplicate votes before they were admitted for further scrutiny. If more than one vote was received in the name of one voter, the returning officer decided which vote, if any, would be counted.

The measures put into place ensured that only one vote was admitted for each elector. There was no evidence or allegations of any activities which undermined the integrity and security of the CCE voting system.

SPECIAL VOTING

Field Operations Program

Teams of AEC officers delivered voting materials and information on the election to indigenous and non-indigenous electors living in remote areas and communities of the Northern Territory. This Field Operations Program was developed as the geographic remoteness of these communities meant that they did not receive a regular postal service or any postal service at all.

A total of 19 Field Operation Teams made up of 70 officers were formed. The teams included a number of local assistants from Aboriginal communities to help in meeting the special needs of Aboriginal communities.

The Field Operations Teams delivered approximately 19 000 ballot paper envelopes to 180 communities. The teams offered assistance with voting and took back a total of 4 977 completed ballot paper envelopes to the counting centres. The remaining ballot paper envelopes were left with electors who could opt to return them by the close of polling.

In addition, a separate program involved AEC staff delivering information about enrolment and voting to electors in remote areas of Western Australia, South Australia, Queensland and the Northern Territory who did not have access to mainstream information sources.

Overseas voting

To cater for eligible electors who were working or holidaying overseas during the CCE period, voting facilities were established at 95 Australian embassies and consulates around the world.
Each overseas post was sent a package containing the ballot papers, information booklets, envelopes and voting ticket booklets for every State and Territory. The preparation and dispatch of the voting materials to each overseas post was a major logistical task. The packages were sent in mid October with the shipments to London and Hong Kong alone weighing 590 kilos and 350 kilos respectively.

Electors voting overseas had the choice of voting either at the embassy or consulate or alternatively requesting the embassy or consulate to send their voting materials to their address.
Overseas voters returning their completed ballot paper to the embassy or consulate had an earlier close of polling at 12 noon on 2 December. This was to ensure that the ballot paper envelopes were received back in Australia by the close of polling. Overseas voters were also able to directly return their ballot papers to Australia by the national close of polling on 9 December 1997.

A total of 1 880 ballot paper envelopes were received back from the overseas posts to a central address in Canberra. Here the envelopes were sorted into the division each overseas voter was enrolled in and were then sent to the divisions to join in the main count.

Antarctic voting

Australians working as members of the Australian Antarctic Expedition were also able to vote in the CCE. Detailed information on the election and sample ballot papers were faxed to specially appointed returning officers at the Casey, Davis, Mawson and Macquarie Island bases. A total of 85 votes were cast at the polling places set up at each Antarctic base. After the close of polling, details of the voting were transmitted to the AEC Head Office in Hobart where they were sorted and sent to the division each voter was enrolled in.

Scrutiny

The counting of the votes, or the scrutiny, had two stages in this election, the preliminary scrutiny which was conducted in Divisional Offices and the further scrutiny which was conducted in both Divisional Offices and State and Territory Head Offices.

PRELIMINARY SCRUTINY

This commenced as soon as ballot paper envelopes were received back by the AEC. The outer reply paid envelopes were opened, the elector details on the voter declaration flaps were checked and the bar codes were scanned to ensure the electors were eligible to vote.

To conduct the preliminary scrutiny each Divisional Office was provided with a bar code reader and software specially developed so they could check the elector details on the ballot paper envelopes against the CD-ROM of electors created at the close of rolls.

The ballot paper envelopes containing the ballot papers were stored unopened until the further scrutiny at the close of polling. Each Divisional Office was supplied with sealable boxes to store the unopened ballot paper envelopes until the commencement of the further scrutiny.

FURTHER SCRUTINY

After the close of polling, the actual counting of the votes commenced with the further scrutiny. Only ballot paper envelopes that met all the requirements of the preliminary scrutiny were entered into the further scrutiny where the envelopes were opened and the ballot papers removed.

The ballot papers were first sorted into formal and informal, with informal papers set aside. The formal ballot papers marked above the line were separated from the papers marked below the line, and the above the line votes were counted in the local Divisional Office.

The ballot papers marked below the line were not counted in the Divisional Office but were forwarded progressively to a central scrutiny in each capital city. The central scrutiny of these votes was conducted using a computerised system.

HOW A CANDIDATE WAS ELECTED

To be elected as a delegate a candidate needed to obtain a proportion, or quota, of the formal votes in their State or Territory. The process was similar to the Senate system.

Quota

The quota was calculated by dividing the total number of formal ballot papers by one more than the number of delegates to be elected and adding '1' to the result (ignoring any remainder). For example the calculation for Queensland at the Constitutional Convention election was:

There were 13 delegates to be elected and there were 943 047 formal votes so the quota was:

$$\frac{943\ 047}{(13+1)} + 1 = 67\ 361$$

The table below lists the quotas calculated in each State and Territory.

State/Territory	Quota
New South Wales	79 392
Victoria	86 875
Queensland	67 361
Western Australia	46 856
South Australia	50 678
Tasmania	22 092
Australian Capital Territory	35 542
Northern Territory	13 176

Counting the first preference votes

For formal ballot papers that were marked above the line, it was taken that a voter had expressed preferences in accordance with the registered voting ticket of the group or ungrouped candidate. If a group had not lodged a voting ticket, it was taken that the voter had expressed their first preference for the first candidate in the group, a second preference for the second candidate in the group and so on for all the candidates in that group. If an ungrouped candidate had not lodged a voting ticket it was taken that the voter had expressed a first preference for the candidate and no other preferences.

First preference votes by group are detailed on pages 81 through 86, and first preference votes by candidate are detailed on pages 87 through 112 of the statistical section.

Transferring the surplus

Once a candidate had received a quota, any further votes for them were considered surplus and were transferred to the candidates who were the second choice of voters. As it was not possible to determine which votes actually elected a candidate and which votes were surplus the entire elected candidate's ballot papers were transferred at a reduced value. The value was calculated by dividing the surplus by the number of votes.

As a result of the process of transferring the surplus, other candidates were elected. If all surplus votes from elected candidates were transferred and there were still some unfilled positions, an exclusion of candidates was undertaken.

Exclusion of candidates

Starting with the candidate who received the lowest number of votes, unelected candidates were excluded from the count and their votes were distributed to the remaining candidates to whom the voters had given their preferences. If a candidate gained a quota following this distribution, they were elected. The above process continued until all delegate positions were filled.

SCRUTINEERS

Candidates were not permitted to take part in the actual conduct of the election, but were able to appoint scrutineers as personal representatives to observe the scrutiny. Each candidate was able to appoint one scrutineer per electoral officer who was involved in the counting of the ballot papers at the counting centre. All proceedings at the preliminary and further scrutiny were open to the inspection of scrutineers.

Results

PROGRESSIVE RESULTS

The nature of the voting system in this election meant that no meaningful figures were available immediately following the close of polling. The first results available were on the number of ballot paper envelopes that had been returned to the AEC and these were released on a progressive basis. Once the total number of formal ballot papers was determined, the counting of the votes commenced and progressive results of the count were released on a regular basis to the media, candidates and other interested people.

ELECTOR PARTICIPATION

At the close of polling a total of 5 626 354 ballot paper envelopes had been returned to the AEC. This meant that approximately 47 per cent of eligible voters who were on the electoral roll returned a ballot paper envelope in the voluntary election. Among the returned envelopes, approximately 1.5 percent were not admitted to the count because they did not pass the requirements of the preliminary scrutiny. A total of 5 430 830 ballot papers were subject to further scrutiny of which 5 312 565 were formal votes.

The participation of electors in the CCE by State and Territory is detailed on page 62 through to 66 of the statistical section.

DECLARATION OF THE POLLS

The counting of the votes took the AEC just over two weeks, with the results for all States and Territories finalised by 23 December 1997. The AEO for each State and Territory officially announced the names of the elected delegates for their State and Territory at a public declaration of results.

The State and Territories are listed below in order of their date of declaration.

State/Territory	Date of declaration
Northern Territory	17 December 1997
Australian Capital Territory	19 December 1997
South Australia	19 December 1997
Western Australia	22 December 1997
Queensland	22 December 1997
New South Wales	22 December 1997
Victoria	23 December 1997
Tasmania	23 December 1997

In addition to publicly declaring the results, the AEO for each State and Territory sent a signed notice to the Electoral Commissioner certifying the names of the elected candidates. The Electoral Commissioner then certified the notice and sent a copy to the Minister. The notice of the results of the Constitutional Convention election was published in the Commonwealth of Australia Gazette on 24 December 1997.

LIST OF ELECTED DELEGATES

The successful candidates who were elected as delegates to the Constitutional Convention are listed in order of their election and by State and Territory on pages 33 and 34 of the statistical section.

CASUAL VACANCIES

Candidates Doone Kennedy (Tasmania) and Vilma Ward (Queensland) notified the Chairman of the Constitutional Convention of their resignations as elected delegates and therefore there were two casual vacancies to be filled in accordance with the Constitutional Convention (Election) Act 1997. As both the delegates were part of a group, the first-listed unelected member of their group who was willing to fill the vacancy was declared elected. Edward O'Farrell (Tasmania) and Thomas Bradley (Queensland) filled the vacancies at the Convention.

Public Information Campaign

The AEC conducted an extensive public information campaign for the CCE. The different nature of the election meant that there were different messages that needed to be communicated to the public. The aims of the campaign were to ensure that all eligible voters were informed and understood:

• what the election was about

• what was required to participate.

The AEC used a number of strategies to communicate to electors including advertising, public relations, the internet, national telephone enquiry service and publications.

ADVERTISING

The national advertising campaign involved the use of television, radio and press advertisements and was divided into three main phases consisting of enrolment, explanation and reminder. Press advertisements announcing the election and informing interested people about the locations of candidate briefing sessions also appeared in the press.

The first television advertisement appeared on Sunday 28 September and the last radio advertisement was broadcast on Sunday 7 December.

The advertising campaign cost $4.9 million and was designed to reach all eligible Australians. Advertisements were translated into 18 languages in the press, 20 languages on radio and 12 languages for television. In addition, advertisements were translated into nine Aboriginal languages and advertisements were broadcast on the Radio for the Print Handicapped.

PUBLIC RELATIONS

The AEC undertook wide ranging public relations activities during the election period to compliment the advertising and other communication strategies.

The public relation activities included:

Media releases: the AEC released over 150 national, State and Territory, and localised media releases during the election period. A number of backgrounders detailing particular aspects of the election were also prepared.

Candidate and media information briefings: separate information briefings for candidates and the media were held by the AEO in each State and Territory following the announcement of the election.

Media interviews: AEC staff were interviewed on national, metropolitan and local radio and television on numerous occassions during the election period. In addition, AEC staff assisted many journalists by providing information on the election.

Photo opportunities: a number of photo opportunities were coordinated including the Australian Rugby Union Team 'Wallabies' on tour in Scotland completing their ballot papers. The four youngest members of the Federal Parliament from each of the four major parties also joined forces outside Parliament House to encourage young Australians to enrol to vote prior to the close of rolls.

PUBLICATIONS

The AEC produced a number of publications for the CCE including:

• Nominations Pamphlet

• Candidates' Handbook

• Scrutineers' Handbook

• Electoral Newsfiles
    No. 65 'Information Guide'
    No. 66 'Close of Rolls'

AEC OFFICERS IN FRONT OF THE TELEPHONE ENQUIRY CENTRE OPERATING IN NEW SOUTH WALES.

A telephone enquiry centre was set up in each State and Territory capital city staffed by AEC permanent and casual staff. One of the important aims for the AEC in establishing the enquiry service was to minimise the number of callers being placed on a waiting queue or receiving an engaged signal. An overflow system was designed so that callers would first be connected to their local Divisional Office but if that line was busy the call would be diverted to the State or Territory enquiry centre or the national overflow centre in Canberra.

The Melbourne and Canberra telephone enquiry centres operated every weekend during the election period, receiving calls made from anywhere in Australia. This was the first time the enquiry service was available every weekend of an election period. The enquiry centres in the other States and the Northern Territory operated on critical weekends during the election period.

TELEPHONE INTERPRETING SERVICE

The CCE was an opportunity for the AEC to review the telephone enquiry assistance that had been provided to electors from non-English speaking backgrounds in previous elections. The (VITS) telephone interpreter service provided during the CCE was an enhanced service that was especially designed for the AEC to meet the needs of non-English speaking electors.

A separate '1800' number was set up for 15 specific language lines and one general number for electors who did not speak any of the 15 specific languages covered. A caller to one of the 15 language specific numbers was 'greeted' by a recorded message in their own language and could be connected to an operator speaking their language if they required further information.

During the election period a total of 10 102 calls were made by electors to the telephone interpreting service. The language lines receiving the most calls were the Cantonese, Mandarin, Vietnamese and Arabic lines. The graph on the following page shows the number of calls each of the language lines received during the election period.

INTERNET

The internet is increasingly becoming an important way to provide information to the public. The AEC's home page at www.aec.gov.au contained substantial information on the CCE and was up-dated throughout the election period. Material that could be accessed included the timetable, national list of candidates, publications and details on the voting system. The list of elected delegates and an enrolment card were also placed on the AEC home page.

SPECIAL TARGET GROUPS

The information campaign included a number of activities directed at special target groups. These activities were aimed at ensuring that every elector had reasonable access to the information and the opportunity to participate.

Electors from non-English speaking backgrounds

In addition to advertising in the ethnic media and the telephone interpreting service, election information was sent to a large number of cultural community groups, organisations, individuals and the ethnic media in a direct mail campaign.

Aboriginal electors

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander electors and other electors living in remote areas of Queensland, Northern Territory and Western Australia were visited by Community Electoral Information Officers to inform them of the election. Posters were produced to advertise the visits of these officers. In the Northern Territory, voting materials were personally delivered to remote communities that had no regular postal service or no postal service at all. Radio advertising in nine Aboriginal languages was also broadcast during the election.

Vision impaired electors

The AEC consulted with the Royal Blind Society to develop initiatives to assist electors who were vision impaired. Audio cassettes and computer discs of the information contained in the booklet Your Guide to the Constitutional Convention Election were provided to disability organisations, libraries and individuals and large print versions of the booklet were also available at AEC offices. A braille version of the information booklet was produced in Queensland to assist electors with visual and hearing difficulties as a trial.

EDUCATION DISPLAY

An interactive display on the CCE was set up at the Electoral Education Centres in Melbourne and Canberra. The displays presented information on the CCE to the many school groups and other interested people who visited the centres during the election period.

Election Litigation

Under the Constitution Convention (Election) Act 1997, challenges to the election could be made to the Federal Court by a petition filed within 14 days of the declaration of the poll.

The Electoral Commissioner advised the Minister of the results of the election on 24 December 1997, and the 14 day period for the filing of petitions therefore expired on 7 January 1998. Only one petition was filed with the Federal Court by this date.

Mr Tony Wiltshire, an unsuccessful candidate for New South Wales, petitioned against the election of Mr Malcolm Turnbull of the Australian Republican Movement (ARM) (as first respondent), and Mr Doug Sutherland of the Australians for a Constitutional Monarchy (ACM) (as second respondent). The AEC was joined as third respondent, and the Commonwealth of Australia (instructed by the Department of Prime Minister and Cabinet) was joined as fourth respondent.

The basis of the petition was a four page newspaper liftout entitled "Republic - Yes or No", which included an outline of the platforms of the two major parties at the election, the ARM and the ACM. The newspaper liftout was prepared by the Department of Prime Minister and Cabinet (PM & C) and distributed during the course of the election in major newspapers. There was no involvement by the AEC in the preparation of this publication.

Mr Wiltshire alleged that by participating in the preparation of the liftout Mr Turnbull and Mr Sutherland improperly took part in the conduct of the election, and that the publication of the views of the major parties influenced the voters and disadvantaged independent candidates. Mr Wiltshire also alleged that the liftout was misleading and deceptive. Mr Wiltshire asked the court to void the election of Mr Turnbull and Mr Sutherland, but produced no evidence to substantiate his allegations.

The hearing of the petition took place in the Federal Court on 15 January 1998. On 16 January, Justice Davies delivered his decision dismissing the petition. In his judgment Justice Davies said the following:

> The preparation and publication of the liftout was, in my opinion, not part of "the conduct of the election" as that term is used in s 52 of the Act. The Department of the Prime Minister and Cabinet did not conduct the election: the Australian Electoral Commission, its officers and agents did so. Mr Wiltshire misunderstands the intent and effect of the liftout....it was a helpful, informative document and was not misleading. It was not directed at the election. It did not promote any candidate or group of candidates over any other.

His Honour concluded that there was no evidence that Mr Turnbull and Mr Sutherland were guilty of "undue influence" in participating in the preparation of the liftout, and that the liftout was not misleading or deceptive: "Voters would have been assisted by the document, not misled by it." Finally, His Honour turned to the technical defects in the petition:

> In the present case, the facts set out by Mr Wiltshire in his petition, which were the facts on which he relied, did not of themselves establish a ground for the avoidance of the elections of Messrs Turnbull and Sutherland. Therefore, the petition was liable to be struck out.

On 27 February 1998, Justice Davies delivered his decision on costs: that the Commonwealth (instructed by PM & C) pay the costs of Mr Turnbull and Mr Sutherland, and that the petitioner, the AEC, and PM & C abide their own costs.

THE FURTHER SCRUTINY IN THE DIVISION OF PERTH

Reviews

The AEC is conducting various internal reviews of its administration of the CCE. A number of electoral procedures and policies were used for the first time at the CCE so the reviews will be important in determining their performance. The results of the reviews will be used in the planning of policy, procedures and services for the conduct of further elections.

OPERATIONAL REVIEWS

The AEC engaged a consultant to prepare a report on the operational process and arrangements adopted for the CCE. The report's focus was to assess the appropriateness and efficiency of the processes and arrangements and to identify if aspects may be incorporated into the delivery of electoral services for federal elections.

PUBLIC INFORMATION CAMPAIGN REVIEWS

Advertising Tracking Research

The AEC commissioned Eureka Strategic Research to undertake concept testing of the explanation advertisement to gauge its suitability. The same firm also conducted tracking research to measure awareness levels of the election and the advertising. Among other findings, the research showed awareness of the election peaked at 91 per cent during the campaign and that 46 per cent of those who voted recalled seeing the explanation advertisement compared to an industry standard of 15-20 per cent for this style of advertisement.

Public Relations review

An internal review of the public relations activities was undertaken in February 1998. The purpose of the review was to assess the effectiveness of the public relations activities including the role of the public relations consultants contracted to assist the AEC. The results of the review will be used in the formulation of the public relations activities for the next federal election.

National Telephone Enquiry Service (13 23 26) review

An internal review of the operation of the national enquiry service was undertaken during January 1998. The review found that the service was effective and presented several recommendations to enhance the service for the next federal election.

Telephone Interpreting Service review

This service was provided through the Victorian Interpreting and Translating Service who conducted a review among its staff of interpreters who acted as an interpreter for more than 70 calls each. The results of the review will be input into the AEC's considerations of how to provide this service for future electoral events.

INTERNAL AUDIT

The Internal Audit section of the AEC provides an independent assessment of the efficiency, economy and effectiveness of the AEC's policies and procedures. For the CCE Internal Audit conducted three reviews.

Risk Analysis of Key Operational Areas

A risk analysis was conducted in October 1997 of the key steps of the CCE including nominations, enrolment, postal vote process, scrutiny and certified result. The analysis found that the AEC had adequate treatment and controls in place to address identified risks associated with the CCE.

IT Assets Control

A review of the systems controls over the transfer of information technology used for the CCE was conducted from December 1997. A number of recommendations were made to improve the accuracy of recording and reporting of asset values and depreciation charges.

AECPAY Casual Payments

A review of payments made to casual employees and paid through the redeveloped AECPAY system commenced in February 1998.

This table shows :

- The number of first preference votes, by State, Territory and nationally, marked above the line.

  In voting above the line, electors chose to vote by placing a number 1 in one box above the line. Preferences were then distributed according to the voting ticket, lodged with the AEC, by the group or ungrouped candidate. If a group did not lodge a voting ticket, preferences were distributed to the candidates in that group, in the order in which they appeared on the list of candidates, and to no other candidates. If an ungrouped candidate did not lodge a voting ticket it was taken that the candidate wished electors to express a first preference only.

- The number of first preference votes, by State, Territory and nationally, marked below the line.

  In voting below the line electors chose to place the candidate identification number, of the candidate of their first choice, in the box marked 1st preference, the candidate identification number of the candidate of their second choice, in the box marked 2nd preference and so on. Electors had to complete at least the 1st preference box and then as many of the remaining boxes as they wished.

- The above the line and below the line votes expressed as a percentage of the total formal votes counted

- The total number of formal votes counted for each State and Territory and nationally
