About “Assistance Dogs” in Japan

- In Japan, there is a law called “The Act on Assistance Dogs for Physically Disabled Persons”.
- This law attempts to facilitate growth of the quality of the “assistance dogs for physically disabled persons” and use of public facilities for people with physical disabilities, to contribute to the independence and social participation of individuals with physical disabilities.
- According to this law, the term “Assistance Dogs for Physically Disabled Persons” refers to “guide dogs”, “service dogs” and “hearing dogs” that have been certified by groups designated by the Ministry of Health, Labour and Welfare.
 - (*) “Assistance animals (other than dogs)” and “assistance dogs” that were trained at overseas training facilities are not recognized as “Assistance Dogs for Physically Disabled Persons” under this law, and will receive the same treatment as pets. This also holds true for “Assistance Dogs” that are used by persons with disabilities other than physical disabilities. For this reason, please be aware that this law states that these animals are not permitted to accompany individuals at places that have an obligation to accept “Assistance Dogs for Physically Disabled Persons” such as public facilities, public transportation, restaurants and hotels.
- Please refer to the following leaflet for details.

Assistance Dog (Assistance Dogs for Physically Disabled Persons) Information

The term “Assistance Dogs” for persons with physical disabilities refers to “guide dogs”, “hearing dogs”, and “service dogs” that assist persons with disabilities of the eyes, ears, or limbs.

These dogs are certified in accordance with “The Act on Assistance Dogs for Physically Disabled Persons” and have received special training.

They are partners of persons with disabilities and therefore not pets. As they are properly trained and taken care of, they are able to follow social manners and are kept clean. Therefore these dogs are accepted in many areas where people tend to go.

Assistance dogs are essential for the independence and social participation of persons with physical disabilities. We hope that everyone will take some time to get a better understanding of assistance dogs and accept them as members of society.

Types of Assistance Dogs

○ Guide Dogs

Guide dogs help people who are not able to see or have difficulty seeing safely navigate through town.

The dogs avoid obstacles and notify their handlers about the path they are walking on, such as turns in the road.

Guide dogs wear harnesses.

○ Hearing Dogs

Hearing dogs notify their handlers, who are not able to hear or have hearing disabilities, of various sounds in daily life. They recognize and notify their handlers of sounds such as doorbells, FAX ring alerts, and babies crying.

Hearing dogs wear vests with a tag written "Hearing Dog".

○ Service Dogs

Service dogs help people with disabilities in their limbs with their daily activities.

These dogs can aid their handler by picking things up and handing them to him/her, bringing over requested objects, and helping with putting on and removing clothes.

Service dogs wear vests with a tag written "Service Dog".

Assistance Dogs go everywhere with their users.

It is required under "The Act on Assistance Dogs for Physically Disabled Persons" that assistance dogs be accepted in various places a person may go. Please do not prohibit their entry just because it is a "dog".

● The following places are required to accept assistance dogs:

- Public facilities that are managed by the country or local public organizations
- Public transportation (such as trains, buses and taxis)
- Public facilities such as commercial facilities, restaurants, hospitals and hotels which are used by the general public
- Offices (work places)
Offices of the country or local public organizations
Private businesses with 50 or more employees

● Places which should make efforts to accept assistance dogs are as follows:

- Offices (work places)
Private businesses with less than 50 employees
- Private housing

Assistance Dogs have been trained well, and are very healthy.

Users of assistance dogs take great responsibility in managing their assistance dogs' activities and make efforts to maintain the assistance dogs' health and cleanliness.

- Assistance dogs are trained to relieve themselves when and where their users instruct them to.
- Assistance dogs are trained to wait patiently under the charge of their users.
 - At restaurants or eating facilities...Assistance dogs wait in areas such as under the table until the meal is over.
 - At accommodations such as hotels and inns...Assistance dogs wait in places such as the corners of rooms or near the entrance way.
 - In public transportation such as trains, buses, taxis, etc...
Assistance dogs avoid soiling the seats by staying by their users' feet.
- Users of assistance dogs make efforts to keep their dog clean by brushing and shampooing them, and also vaccinate and take their dogs for check-ups.

When an assistance dog is wearing a harness or vest with its user, the dog is “working”.

- Make sure not to talk to, stare, touch without permission, or try to grab the attention of a working assistance dog.
- Make sure not to offer water or food to an assistance dog.
 - Users of assistance dogs manage the amount and time the dog eats and drinks, along with the dog's health and toilet timing.

To facilities accepting assistance dogs

- Assistance dogs are able to wait under their users' instruction, so there is no special equipment or furnishings needed to accommodate them.
- If there are complaints from other customers about accepting the assistance dog along with its user, please ask for understanding by explaining the obligation to accept these dogs under "The Act on Assistance Dogs for Physically Disabled Persons", and also that the users are highly responsible for their dog's actions and health maintenance.
- If the assistance dog blocks passageways, sniffs around or makes any other trouble, please communicate it clearly to the dog's user.
- There are occasions where the assistance dog's user needs help, even when accompanied by his/her dog. If you see an assistance dog user in trouble, please try communicating with them by speaking to him/her or through writing (in case of hearing dog users).
